

NEW LEGAL TANGLE MAY SAVE RUTH HEWITT MUST DIE IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

GOVERNOR REFUSES TO HALT EXECUTION OF DOUBLE-SLAYER

Youngest Criminal To Be Executed Is Apparently Calm

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 6.—Ohio's death house at the state penitentiary is ready for the electrocution of seventeen-year-old Floyd Hewitt, of Conneaut, tonight.

Spending his last hours with his mother, who came to his cell in death row early this morning, he seemed unworried. He has made no requests, according to Warden Thomas and awaits his fate in apparent equanimity.

Last hopes of saving the boy killer were abandoned this morning when Governor Vic Donahey announced that he would not intervene.

Hewitt will be the youngest person ever electrocuted in Ohio and the second youngest person ever executed in the state. A youth a month younger than Hewitt was hanged at the penitentiary thirty-eight years ago.

Efforts to prove that Hewitt is feeble-minded and to have his sentence commuted to life imprisonment failed when the state board of clemency refused to recommend such action after a hearing two days ago.

Hewitt confessed to one of the most brutal murders in the criminal history of the state—a double killing at Conneaut last February 14, when a mother and her five-year-old child were beaten to death. The victims were Mrs. Fred Brown and her five-year-old son, Fred Brown, Jr. The husband and father was away from home, at work, the night of the tragedy.

Young Hewitt, a neighbor, frequently visited the house and listened to the radio, he said. The night of the fourteenth, he became suddenly "crazed by radio jazz" and attacked Mrs. Brown, according to his confession.

She resisted and he struck her with a baseball bat and then beat the child to death with a stove poker to silence him. Returning home the next morning, Fred Brown discovered the battered bodies of his wife and son.

Hewitt was arrested on suspicion and confessed the double killing. He was convicted of killing the child, while an indictment charging murder of the mother was left pending.

RESCUE DIRECTOR TO GIVE TESTIMONY

CHARLESTOWN NAVY YARD, Boston, Mass., Jan. 6.—What happened at the bottom of the sea will be told by Lieutenant Commander Edward Ellsberg, director of the rescue operations on the sunken submarine S-4, scheduled to be called as the first witness today before the naval court of inquiry investigating the disaster.

It was Ellsberg, the hero of the submarine S-51 salvage operations two years ago, who vainly drew on his genius in an attempt to rescue the survivors of the entombed crew of the S-4 in Provincetown harbor following the submersible's collision with the coast guard cutter Paulding several weeks ago.

Ellsberg will tell his dramatic tale of the futile efforts to save the six survivors in the torpedo room of the S-4. He will be questioned by the members of the board as to the salvage technique used and as to why air was not pumped in through the S C tubes sooner than it was.

REPORT POLES AND LITHUANIA CLASH

BERLIN, Jan. 6.—A new clash between Poland and Lithuania was reported today in dispatches from Warsaw.

A fifteen-minute fusillade between border guards on the Lithuanian-Polish border at Krzaczyn, was reported. One Lithuanian was severely wounded.

Fears are entertained that this skirmish may lead to a revival of the troubles between these two countries, which were quelled at the recent League of Nations council meeting.

TWENTY TWO HURT

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Building inspectors and city officials began an investigation today of a theater collapse in Brooklyn last night in which twenty-two persons were injured. A section of heavy plaster fell seventy-five feet from the roof of Kingsway theater into the crowded orchestra pit. Three patrons were injured.

MANAGUA WELCOMES LINDY

Internal Conflict In Nicaragua Is Forgotten As Nation Pays Honors To America's "Lone Eagle"

MANAGUA, Jan. 6.—Forgetting the rumble of armed conflict not far away, Nicaragua today prepared to give the greatest honors to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, who came out of the sky as an envoy of good will.

The first function on the visitor's schedule today was the presentation of a medal of honor from the Nicaraguan congress. Later he will attend a picnic luncheon at Mel Tizate, a beautiful coffee plantation nearby, and tonight he will be guest of honor at a grand ball at the Managua Social Club. Early tomorrow morning, Col. Lindbergh will leave here in his famous air-steed, the Spirit of St. Louis, and wing his way to San Jose, Costa Rica.

On his flight from Honduras, the flying colonel took a longer route than necessary in order to skirt the scene of present hostilities between United States marines and the Rebel forces under General Sandino.

SLIPPER FITS SO CINDERELLA WILL WED IN MAY-DECEMBER ROMANCE

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Broadway again produced one of those Cinderella romances where the millionaire benefactor of the poor but beautiful little girl becomes enraptured in her patron's heart.

From his suite in the Hotel Plaza, E. W. Marland, 53, head of the Marland Oil company, announces he soon will wed Lydie Marland, 23, his adopted daughter. When Lydie was sixteen, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Roberts of Philadelphia, gave her up to be the foster daughter of the rich oil man.

To add the touch exquisite, the coming wedding is to take place in the comparatively humble Roberts home.

Marland's first wife died a year ago last June. The prospective bridegroom was born in Pittsburgh, practiced law there at twenty-one, went to Ponca City, Okla., to align himself with the oil industry and now is reputed to be worth $85,000,000.

REBELS ARE HIDDEN WHILE MARINES ARE BEING REINFORCED

No Immediate Fight Expected—Rumors Are Denied

MANAGUA, Jan. 6.—With General Sandino and his rebel troops keeping well hidden, the United States marine forces today were fortifying their present positions at Quilali and Nueva Segovia as reinforcements and supplies arrived.

No immediate battle is expected at El Chipote, the rebel mountain stronghold, it was indicated.

Several reports current regarding Sandino's power among the people and remarks concerning "heavy losses" by the marines made in Mexico City were definitely refuted by marine headquarters and persons familiar with the situation.

Reports that Sandino had established a "republic" were scouted; authoritative sources pointing out that the rebel leader has no support whatsoever within the country and is operating only in the outlying and unimportant sections of Nicaragua solely as a bandit.

Marine headquarters announced that the total number of deaths during the present campaign was fourteen.

In the last two engagements, it was announced, six marines were killed and nine wounded. In the same engagements, while the total casualties of the Sandino forces is not known, due to their habit of removing as many bodies as possible from the scene of action, marines have discovered and buried the decomposed bodies of thirty-three rebels.

The marines killed in the last two encounters were Sergeants John Hemphill and L. G. Bruce; Corporal Adolph Theilhard; Privates George Goldsmith, Watson Grady, Estler Crosson.

TWO YOUTHS DEAD FROM BOX CAR FUMES

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Two youths killed by monoxide gas fumes in a box car of a Baltimore and Ohio train which pulled into St. George, Staten Island, Wednesday, have been identified.

One of them was Austin E. Berry, 21, of No. 893 1/2 Franklin Ave., Johnstown, Pa., the other, Richard Minehan, 21, of No. 1109 Boyd Ave., Johnstown. Berry's body was identified by his brother, Minehan by the father.

Neville Harrigan, 23, of Weaver Court, Johnstown, who is in Staten Island Hospital still unconscious from the influence of the monoxide fumes was identified by his brother, Dr. Mark Harrigan.

Gibson's wife has been living with Mrs. Nellie Hansen, sister of Mrs. Porter.

BOY CHALLENGES DEATH AND LOSSES

CHICAGO, Jan. 6.—Edward Biedzinski, 13, is dead today because he disobeyed the orders of his doctor and parents.

Edward, who was warned that he must stop romping and play like other boys because of a weak heart, couldn't resist the temptation to skate. He was willing to gamble with death.

So last night, unwatched by his parents, he took his skates and stole out of the house. He glided over the ice once and dropped dead. A palmist squad was called, but the boy could not be revived.

JEALOUS YOUTH MURDERS GIRL WHO "SMILED AT OTHER BOYS"

CLEVELAND, Jan. 6.—Because she "smiled at other boys," Anthony Vontez, 19, shot and killed Alice Preskar, 19, after the couple returned to the girl's home from a dance here last midnight, the youth told authorities investigating the shooting today, detectives said.

Vontez was calmly smoking a cigarette when police arrived at the scene of the shooting. Arresting officers declared the youth readily admitted that he had quarreled with Miss Preskar, and that he finally drew a revolver.

"Put the gun away," the girl was quoted as having said to him, whereupon he fired a bullet into her heart. She died almost instantly.

Vontez was formally charged with the murder this morning.

Brig. Gen. Logan Feland, commander at Paris Island, has been ordered to resume command of the marine forces in Nicaragua. He is a veteran Nicaraguan commander.

HICKMAN ATTORNEY ATTEMPTS TO PROVE HE HAD ACCOMPLICE

Walsh Scouts Story Of Lone Hand—Two Enter Pleas

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 6.—The question of whether William Edward Hickman had an accomplice in the kidnapping and brutal murder of 12-year-old Marion Parker engaged the attention of Jerome Walsh of Kansas City, attorney for the "Fox," today.

This was pursuant to Walsh's announcement that he would investigate the matter, which had been regarded as settled by Hickman's confession that he played a lone hand in the abduction and killing of the Los Angeles school girl.

Walsh's independent probe of the accomplice angle of the Hickman case is believed to have been prompted by Hickman's confession to participation in the holdup of a Los Angeles drug store, which resulted in the shooting to death of C. Ivy Thoms. Walsh Hunt, implicated in the holdup by Hickman's confession, has admitted his part in the fatal robbery.

Following their indictment on murder charges yesterday, both youths appeared in Superior Judge Carlos S. Hardy's court for arraignment.

Hickman entered two pleas, "not guilty" and "not guilty by reason of insanity," the latter being the same plea he entered to the charge of kidnapping and murdering Marion Parker. Hunt was given until January 10 to plea.

Efforts on the part of A. Gray Gilmer of Oklahoma City, Hunt's attorney, to have his client's case transferred to the juvenile court, failed when Juvenile Judge Scott ruled that the case did not fall under the jurisdiction of his court. Attorney Gilmer, requesting the transference submitted Hunt's birth certificate to Judge Hardy. The document showed that Hickman's confessed accomplice is 16 years old.

WRIGHT FIELD MAY BE MAIL AIRPORT

DAYTON, O., Jan. 6.—Wright Air Field here may be used as a municipal airport for the air mail service when the proposed Louisville-Cleveland line is established, according to a letter received here today from the war department.

DEFENSE WOULD USE INSURANCE SUIT TO HOLD UP EXECUTION

Governor Smith Cold To Insanity Plea—Not To Interfere

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—A new move to save Ruth Snyder from the electric chair was launched today. Her attorney, Edgar Hazelton, has begun action in the supreme court here to force trial by jury of an insurance suit at which the woman slayer's testimony would be required.

Instead of Governor Alfred E. Smith's deciding whether Mrs. Snyder must die next week or the execution be postponed, this question would be transferred to Justice Aaron J. Levy of the supreme court.

Governor Smith has indicated that he will deny the pleas of Mrs. Snyder and her former paramour, Henry Judd Gray, for clemency. He showed coldness to the appeal that Mrs. Snyder was in the "twilight zone" of insanity and Gray did not know what he was doing when he killed the woman's husband, Albert Snyder, with a sash-weight.

Gray is not involved in the new move to stay the execution.

Hazelton made application to have tried by jury the suit of the Prudential Insurance Company to cancel the $35,000 insurance on the life of Snyder. Mrs. Snyder is one of the defendants. He contends that her testimony is essential in determining if Snyder's obtaining such heavy insurance was contrived by Mrs. Snyder in anticipation of her murdering him and getting the money.

Justice Levy must decide whether Mrs. Snyder should be heard in open court. It is within his power to stay the execution until this is done or, on the other hand, he could order that her testimony be taken in Sing Sing prison immediately.

The insurance company is seeking to cancel the two policies on the ground that they were obtained, not by Snyder's desire but upon the suggestion and initiative of his wife, and because she had an ulterior purpose.

Hazelton demands a jury trial because he contends that the principal issue is not of law but of fact as to whether Snyder had legal knowledge of the trial. He contends that the trial should take place as quickly as possible and before Jan. 12, the date of her scheduled execution.

Hearing of the insurance suit would undoubtedly be a long drawn out affair, since numerous questions would have to be answered. Originally Mrs. Snyder was the sole beneficiary of the policies, assigned to her daughter, for whom the condemned woman's mother, Mrs. Josephine Brown, is guardian. Consequently, Mrs. Snyder, Mrs. Brown and Lorraine are defendants in the insurance company's suit.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 6.—Counsel for Mrs. Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray, scheduled to die in the electric chair next Thursday for the murder of the woman's husband, today pinned their final hopes of saving the lives of the condemned pair on a fragile thread of legislative action.

Governor Alfred E. Smith has indicated that he will not grant clemency to Gray and the widow, but Assemblyman Christopher C. McGrath, New York Democrat, will introduce a bill in the state legislature next Monday night to abolish capital punishment in New York state. As soon as the measure has been introduced, Edgar F. Hazelton, counsel for Mrs. Snyder, and William J. Millard, Gray's attorney, plan to petition the governor to reprieve Mrs. Snyder and Gray until such a time as the legislature has taken final action on the abolition proposal.

The attorneys will point out that this bill will inaugurate a new state policy if it passes and will state that the governor could make the bill retroactive in respect to Gray and Mrs. Snyder.

Little hope of saving the condemned pair is held out here.

INDICTED MAN IS VICTIM OF FLAMES

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O., Jan. 6.—Kenneth Ayers, 23, who is under indictment for manslaughter following an auto collision in which A. F. Born, 34, was killed, is in a serious condition in a hospital here today from severe burns suffered from a fire which for a time threatened to destroy the whole city.

The White Lilly gas station caught fire late yesterday. A tank of 232,000 gallons of gasoline supplies fuel to this station. People nearby fled from their homes seeing that explosion of the tank was eminent.

William Norris became a hero when he climbed up the side of the tank and shut off the valve supplying gas to the Lilly station. Ayers, according to reports, is not expected to recover from the burns that he sustained in the fire.

DOCTOR ACCUSED OF MURDER TALKS WITH ATTORNEY

Dr. Charles McMillan, of Los Angeles, who has been charged with the murder of Mrs. Amelia Appleby, whose body was found on a roadside sewed in a bag, is shown consulting with his wife and Attorney Nathan Freedman, his counsel, who also defended Gerald Chapman.

DENY REPORTS THAT ACCOMPLICE AIDED VELMA WEST MURDER

Sheriff Denies Any Additional Probe Is Being Made

PAINESVILLE, O., Jan. 6.—Reports that authorities are working on a new theory in the Velma West murder investigation, to the effect that the 21 year old "hammer murderess" is shielding a second person, were denied today by Sheriff Ed Rasmussen.

The sheriff declared he had no evidence that would tend to contradict the confession of the "slapper widow" that she beat her young husband, Thomas West, to death with a claw hammer, in the bedroom of their cottage at Perry, O., the night of Dec. 6.

A "blind rage" prompted her, she says, after West had spoken disparagingly of her friends and relatives and slapped her face. Despite this confession, in which the slim blonde from Cleveland's West side assumes sole responsibility, the rumor persists that she had an accomplice.

Previous to the slaying, the two had quarrelled, it is pointed out. The man would presumably have been on his guard, thus making it difficult or impossible for so small a woman to attack and overcome him with a hammer.

Sheriff Rasmussen when informed by International News Service of these rumors declared he knew nothing of them. Unless there are other developments, the state will continue to act on the assumption that Mrs. West's confession is the true and complete account of the killing, he said.

LEAGUE APPROVES KELLOGG PROPOSAL

GENEVA, Jan. 6.—General approval of Secretary Kellogg's recent plurilateral pact to outlaw war was expressed in League of Nations circles today.

The consensus of opinion was that the proposal harmonizes with the aim of the league, because the covenant of the league specifically provides that there shall be no recourse to war unless all efforts at peaceful settlement of disputes fail.

It was felt that if, as Foreign Minister Briand has suggested, the treaty were amended to include this measure against aggressive wars, no reservation would be necessary since it would then be merely a reiteration of the Polish resolution which the league assembly unanimously adopted last September.

WILL TRANSFER LENGEL TRIAL TO LISBON, OHIO, NEXT WEEK

CANTON, Ohio, Jan. 6.—The Saranus A. Lengel murder trial will be transferred formally to Lisbon, Columbian County, next Tuesday, it was announced here today by Molo W. Cathon, deputy clerk of courts. The journal entry ordering the transfer has been filed and

CHICAGO DEMMIES WANT CONVENTION

CHICAGO, Jan. 6.—Chicago Democratic leaders, headed by George E. Brennan, national committee man, will go to Washington next week to see what can be done about bringing the Democratic national convention to Chicago.

The delegation will be prepared to offer $125,000 cash and a guarantee of payment of all expenses for the privilege of entertaining the big pow wow here next June.

Civic associations and business leaders, regardless of party affiliations, have pledged their support.

REPORT PREMIER OF ROUMANIA IS ILL

BUDAPEST, Jan. 6.—Newspapers here today reported that Vintila Bratianu, present premier of Rumania, has suffered several strokes ascribed to advanced arteriosclerosis.

Prince Stirgey Titelescu, it was reported, has been mentioned as possible successor to Bratianu's office.

Vintila Bratianu became premier of Rumania last November immediately following the death of his brother, Jon Bratianu, Rumania's "iron man."

HARDY IS ILL LONDON, Jan. 6.—Thomas Hardy, British novelist, was described as "very ill" today, in a bulletin issued by attending physicians at his home at Margate, Dorchester. Hardy has been ill for several days.

SUN AT MAXIMUM ACTIVITY-PROMISES GOOD WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Sometime within the year of 1928 the sun is expected to pass through its period of maximum activity, reached once in an approximate cycle of every eleven years, with a promise of more normal magnetic conditions and possibly better weather on the earth.

Dr. C. G. Abbot, internationally known astronomer at Smithsonian Institution, said today that it cannot be determined certainly as yet, whether or not the sun spot concentration, causing increased radiation, has attained the maximum.

Smithsonian observatories, scattered in various parts of the world, have shown a fairly uniform state of solar radiation in the last few months, indicating possibly that the sun spots are at the climax of their periodical intensity.

Important observations have been made by scientists during the present abnormally active state of the sun. The many disastrous storms of the last two years, with millions of dollars in property loss and heavy death toll, peculiar behavior of radio signals and other phenomena have been attributed by some scientists to the powerful rays with which the sun bombards the earth in sun spot cycles.

Justice Levy must decide whether Mrs. Snyder should be heard in open court. It is within his power to stay the execution until this is done or, on the other hand, he could order that her testimony be taken in Sing Sing prison immediately.

The insurance company is seeking to cancel the two policies on the ground that they were obtained, not by Snyder's desire, but upon the suggestion and initiative of his wife, and because she had an ulterior purpose.

Hazeltin demands a jury trial because he contends that the principal issue is not of law but of fact as to whether Snyder had legal knowledge of the policies. He contends that the trial should take place as quickly as possible and before Jan. 12, the date of her scheduled execution.

Hearing of the insurance suit would undoubtedly be a long drawn out affair, since numerous questions would have to be answered. Originally, Mrs. Snyder was the sole beneficiary of the policies. She, however, assigned the money to her daughter, for whom the condemned woman's mother, Mrs. Josephine Brown, is guardian. Consequently, Mrs. Snyder, Mrs. Brown and Lorraine are defendants in the insurance company's suit.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 6.—Council for Mrs. Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray, scheduled to die in the electric chair next Thursday for the murder of the woman's husband, today aimed their final hopes of saving the lives of the condemned pair on a fragile thread of legislative action.

Governor Alfred E. Smith has indicated that he will not grant clemency to Gray and the widow, but Assemblyman Christopher C. McGrath, New York Democrat, will introduce, Edgar F. Hazeltin, counsel for Mrs. Snyder, and William J. Millard, Gray's attorney, plan to petition the governor to make the bill retroactive in respect to Gray and Mrs. Snyder.

Little hope of saving the condemned pair is held out here.

HICKMAN ATTORNEY ATTEMPTS TO PROVE HE HAD ACCOMPLICE

Walsh Scouts Story Of
Lone Hand—Two Enter Pleas

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 6.—The question of whether William Edward Hickman had an accomplice in the kidnaping and brutal murder of 12-year-old Marion Parker engaged the attention of Jerome Walsh of Kansas City, attorney for the "Fox," today.

This was pursuant to Walsh's announcement that he would investigate the matter, which had been regarded as settled by Hickman's confession that he played a lone hand in the abduction and killing of the Los Angeles school girl.

Walsh's independent probe of the accomplice angle of the Hickman case is believed to have been prompted by Hickman's confession to participation in the holdup of a Los Angeles drug store, which resulted in the shooting to death of C. Ivy Thoms, Welby Hunt, implicated in the holdup by Hickman's confession, has admitted his part in the fatal robbery.

Following their indictment on murder charges yesterday, both youths appeared in Superior Judge Carlos S. Hardy's court for arraignment.

Hickman entered two pleas, "not guilty" and "not guilty by reason of insanity," the latter being the same plea he entered to the charge of kidnaping and murdering Marion Parker. Hunt was given until January 10 to plea.

Efforts on the part of A. Gray Gilmer of Oklahoma City, Hunt's attorney, to have his client's case transferred to the juvenile court, failed when Juvenile Judge Scott ruled that the case did not fall under the jurisdiction of his court. Attorney Gilmer, requesting the transfer, submitted Hunt's birth certificate to Judge Hardy. The document showed that Hickman's confessed accomplice is 16 years old.

DEFENSE WOULD USE INSURANCE SUIT TO HOLD UP EXECUTION

Governor Smith Cold To Insanity Plea—Not To Interfere

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—A new move to save Ruth Snyder from the electric chair was launched today. Her attorney, Edgar Hazeltin, has begun action in the supreme court here to force trial by jury of an insurance suit at which the woman slayer's testimony would be required.

Instead of Governor Alfred E. Smith's deciding whether Mrs. Snyder must die next week or the execution be postponed, this question would be transferred to Justice Aaron J. Levy of the supreme court.

Governor Smith has indicated that he will deny the pleas of Mrs. Snyder and her former paramour, Henry Judd Gray, for clemency. He showed coldness to the appeal that Mrs. Snyder was in the "twilight zone" of insanity and Gray did not know what he was doing when he killed the woman's husband, Albert Snyder, with a sash-weight.

Gray is not involved in the new move to stay the execution. Hazeltin made application to have tried by jury the suit of the Prudential Insurance Company to cancel the $95,000 insurance on the life of Snyder. Mrs. Snyder is one of the defendants. He contends that her testimony is essential in determining if Snyder's obtaining such heavy insurance was contrived by Mrs. Snyder in anticipation of her murdering him and getting the money.

Justice Levy must decide whether Mrs. Snyder should be heard in open court. It is within his power to stay the execution until this is done or, on the other hand, he could order that her testimony be taken in Sing Sing prison immediately.

The insurance company is seeking to cancel the two policies on the ground that they were obtained, not by Snyder's desire, but upon the suggestion and initiative of his wife, and because she had an ulterior purpose.

XENIAN HAS 200 YEAR OLD BOOK OF "LOGICK AND RHETORICK"

"No man can write correctly, unless he thinks justly; the way to think justly is to observe the errors which others have fallen into for want of due reflection and rightly considering their subject."

This is a sample of the logic set forth in "The Arts of Logick and Rhetorick," printed in 1728 in London, Eng., and now in the possession of Poague A. Wright, W. Third St., former dealer in books and stationery.

The book, yellow with age, but clearly legible, is illustrated by "examples taken out of the best authors, ancient and modern, in all the polite languages, interpreted and explained by that learned and judicious critic, Father Bouhours."

Part One is devoted to "False Thoughts and Truth Thoughts, and in what the difference between them consists."

"That the 'rightness of a thought is not of itself sufficient to render it good,' is the dedication of Part Two.

"Thoughts often become bad, by the author's aiming at too much wit," was the observation of Pere Bouhours, in Part Three, dealing with how the "sublime in the way of thinking, becomes bombast, the agreeable, affectation and the delicate, subtly." "A thought is vicious when it is carried to an excess of grandeur, in the agreeable kind, when it has more agreeable than it should have and in the delicate kind, when that delicacy is so fine spun, as to become subtle."

To the author's dissertations were added parallel quotations "out of the most eminent English authors in verse and prose, where in the like observations are made on their beauties and blemishes, in all the various kinds of thought and expression."

The book was printed for John Clark and Richard Hott, John Pemberton, Richard Ford and John Gray and is only one of many old and valuable volumes in Mr. Wright's possession.

THIS WOMAN FOUND RELIEF

After Long Suffering by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

In a little town of the Middle West, was a discouraged woman. For four years she had been in such poor health that she could not stoop to put on her own shoes. Unable to do her work, unable to go out of doors or enjoy a friendly chat with her neighbors, life seemed dark indeed to Mrs. Daugherty.

Then one day, a booklet was left at her front door. Idly she turned the pages. Soon she was reading with quickened interest. The little booklet was filled with letters from women in conditions similar to hers who had found better health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I began taking the Vegetable Compound," Mrs. Daugherty writes, "and after I took the third bottle, I found relief. I am on my eleventh bottle and I don't have that trouble any more, and feel like a different woman. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to everyone I see who has trouble like mine. I am willing to answer any letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Ed. DAUGHERTY, 1308 Orchard Ave., Muscatine, Iowa.

The World And All

BY CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

IN NEW YORK

Forrest Wilson, formerly of Cleveland, but now of Paris, is spending a few weeks in New York and Washington. I'm told he is finishing a very remarkable novel, which he has already sold at a handsome figure for magazine publication, and also to a book publishing house. The book, inside gossip says, will be called "Rich Brat," and will deal in an altogether fresh manner with a phase of Parisian life heretofore untouched by novelists.

Wilson is one of those newspaper men who has always been about to write a novel. Tradition has it that the newspaper man who is always just going to write a novel never gets it written. Well, Wilson will have his finished by the time you read this, and he already has a handsome roll of greenbacks in his pockets for it.

They say Wilson (whose old newspaper friends knew him as Bob) has had the idea for this novel in his mind for many years. For three or four years at least he has been working on it, during spare time. Until lately he has had almost no time to spare for this work, but the time finally came that newspaper reporters dream of. Wilson was able to go away into the country and devote a few weeks to his book. And so there is gold in the pot at the end of the rainbow, after all.

Clare Ogden Davis, of Texas, is finishing a remarkable novel, too, and other western states, who have I am told it is to be called "Going Up," and it will have a lot of Texas, to put their novels into type.

in it. I believe it has already found a publisher, and the gossip is that the novel will be one of next season's headlines.

This Mrs. Davis is another newspaper person who went around the country for years with a fine brain for a novel steaming in her brain. She used to be Miss Clare Ogden, and was in newspaper work in Houston and other Texas towns. She was private secretary to Governor Ma Ferguson, and the romantic political atmosphere of those hectic Texas days is the atmosphere of this new novel, says my literary spy.

New York is seething with the work and goings to and fro of these folk from Texas, Ohio, Nebraska and other western states, who have come here to find the opportunity to put their novels into type.

GETS EVEN WITH ELEVATOR
HAMILTON, O.—A man waited for an elevator in a building here for some time. When several lifts whizzed by without stopping, his disposition became irked and his patience sorely tried. Just then a lift passed him for the third time and to get even, he kicked in the glass door and then walked with great satisfaction to the seventh floor. The deed cost him $40.87 in court, but he averred "the satisfaction was worth $200."

SPRING VALLEY

The Willing Workers Class of the Friends Sabbath School held its annual banquet Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Ella Babb. A Christmas tree was one feature of the evening and the baby pictures of the members another. A delicious supper typical of the holiday season was enjoyed. Rev. and Mrs. W. E. Bogan of near Hillsboro were among the guests.

Mrs. Anna Anderson is very ill. No school could be held here Tuesday owing to having a new furnace installed in the grade building and not being completed in time to heat the building sufficiently owing to the extreme weather.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Hartsock were called to Springfield this week by the serious illness of their mother Mrs. Elizabeth Hartsock, head nurse at the Masonic Home.

The Missionary Society of the Zion Baptist Church held its first meeting of the new year Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Viola Hubbard, E. Church St. The annual reports of the officers held. Mrs. Carrie Jackson was re-elected president. Mrs. M. D. Hillard, vice president. Mrs. Patti Smith, secretary. Mrs. Lucy Brown, assistant secretary. Miss L. J. Payne, treasurer. The Christmas committee made an excellent report of the work during the holidays. Mrs. M. E. Harris gave the mission study lesson. The regular meeting in February will be held with the president, Mrs. Carrie Jackson, E. Main St.

THIS WOMAN FOUND RELIEF

After Long Suffering by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

In a little town of the Middle West, was a discouraged woman. For four months she had been in such poor health that she could not stoop to put on her own shoes. Unable to do her work, unable to go out of doors or enjoy a friendly chat with her neighbors, life seemed dark indeed to Mrs. Daugherty.

Then one day, a booklet was left at her front door. Idly she turned the pages. Soon she was reading with quickened interest. The little booklet was filled with letters from women in conditions similar to hers who had found better health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I began taking the Vegetable Compound," Mrs. Daugherty writes, "and after I took the third bottle, I found relief. I am on my eleventh bottle and I don't have that trouble any more, and feel like a different woman. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to everyone I see who has trouble like mine. I am willing to answer any letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. ED. DAUGHERTY, 1308 Orchard Ave., Muscatine, Iowa.

the idea of the church being much revived and great good to all concerned being felt. The preaching service will begin Monday night together with the song and prayer service. You are welcome.

Mrs. Ada Rountree, E. Third St., who has been on the sick list, is somewhat improved.

The annual birthday dinner celebrated by Mrs. Anna Penn, was a scene of a very pleasant occasion at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Taylor, E. Main St., Sunday January 1, in spite of the very inclement weather. Mrs. William Davis of Dayton, who always brings a birthday cake, was present, also Mr. and Mrs. Jordan Robb, Mrs. Florence Cloque, Mrs. Bertha Booth and daughter Zelda of this city.

Miss Serena Booth of Evans Ave., is among the sick, also Mrs. Carrie Jones of E. Church St.

Miss Lucretia Willis, E. Market St., spent the new year vacation at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Anderson, Wilberforce.

Mrs. Ora Craig, N. Columbus Ave., is confined indoors by illness. The Effie Carter W. C. T. U. held an interesting session Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Hattie Spencer, N. Taylor St. After the regular routine of business, Mrs. George Kaiser, N. Detroit St., was present and gave out many helpful suggestions. The report of the county executive was made by the president, Mrs. M. E. Harris.

the latter having gone to the hospital on account of illness.

Councilman J. W. Anthony is visiting relatives at New Madison, and Richmond, Ind.

Mr. and Mrs. Susan Smith of Spring Valley spent New Year's with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George Thorne.

Local thermometers Tuesday morning registered from four to ten below zero.

Frank Kakoc who had been visiting his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Wright and their daughter, Frances for several days, returned to his home in Milwaukee, last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Ledbetter entertained in honor of Mr. Ledbetter's forty-fifth birthday, his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ledbetter, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Ledbetter, Mr. Elwood Ledbetter, Mrs. E. W. Henning and son, Walter, Mrs. Ledbetter's brother, Marion James, Donald Foster, Mr. Ledbetter received many useful presents.

The village officers are now composed of the following persons: mayor Oliver Watson; Marshal, H. H. Dale; clerk, James Crowl; treasurer, Jesse Huston; members of the council, J. W. Anthony, Henry Weller, Earl Hess, Jesse Weaver, Elwood Rhonemus and J. L. Myers.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—A report that Lessing J. Rosenwald, 36, a director and vice president of Sears, Roebuck and Company, would be tendered the presidency of the firm to succeed the late Charles M. Kittle, was current in business circles today. Mr. Rosenwald is general manager of the Sears, Roebuck properties in Philadelphia. He is a son of Julius Rosenwald, Sr., former president of the company.

The World And All

BY CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

IN NEW YORK

Forrest Wilson, formerly of Cleveland, but now of Paris, is spending a few weeks in New York and Washington. I'm told he is finishing a very remarkable novel, which he has already sold at a handsome figure for magazine publication, and also to a book publishing house. The book, inside gossip says, will be called "Rich Brat," and will deal in an altogether fresh manner with a phase of Parisian life heretofore untouched by novelists.

Wilson is one of those newspaper men who has always been about to write a novel. Tradition has it that the newspaper man who is always just going to write a novel never gets it written. Well, Wilson will have his finished by the time you read this, and he already has a handsome roll of greenbacks in his pockets for it.

They say Wilson (whose old newspaper friends knew him as Bob) has had the idea for this novel in his mind for many years. For three or four years at least he has been working on it, during spare time. Until lately he has had almost no time to spare for this work, but the time finally came that newspaper reporters dream of. Wilson was able to go away into the country and devote a few weeks to his book. And so there is gold in the pot at the end of the rainbow, after all.

Clare Ogden Davis, of Texas, is finishing a remarkable novel, too. I am told it is to be called "Going come here to find the opportunity Up," and it will have a lot of Texas to put their novels into type.

in it. I believe it has already found a publisher, and the gossip is that the novel will be so unusual in plot that it will be one of next season's headlines.

This Mrs. Davis is another newspaper person who went around the country for years with a fine plot for a novel stewing in her brain. She used to be Miss Clare Ogden, and was in newspaper work in Houston and other Texas towns. She was private secretary to Governor Ma Ferguson, and the romantic political atmosphere of those hectic Texas days is the atmosphere of this new novel, says my literary spy.

New York is seething with the work and goings to and fro of these folk from Texas, Ohio, Nebraska and other western states, who have come here to find the opportunity to put their novels into type.

GETS EVEN WITH ELEVATOR
HAMILTON, O.—A man waited for an elevator in a building here for some time. When several lifts whizzed by without stopping, his disposition became irked and his patience sorely tried. Just then a lift passed him for the third time and to get even, he kicked in the glass door and then walked with great satisfaction to the seventh floor. The deed cost him $40.87 to court, but he averred "the satisfaction was worth $200."

DETAILS OF MARRIAGE

IN FORT WAYNE GIVEN.

The marriage of Miss Mary Elizabeth Ninde, daughter of Mr. Harry W. Ninde, Fort Wayne, Ind., and Mr. John Waldo Howell, near Yellow Springs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Howell, was quietly solemnized Monday night at 6:30 o'clock at the Hotel Keenan, Fort Wayne, in the presence of the members of the immediate families. Details of the marriage, as given in a Fort Wayne newspaper were as follows:

Rev. Arthur J. Folsom, pastor of Plymouth Congregational church, officiated at the ceremony which was performed in the mezzanine parlor before an improvised altar flanked by seven-branched candelabra bearing tall lighted tapers. The only attendants were Miss Jane Ninde of Chicago, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid, and Folger B. Howell of Yellow Springs, O., brother of the groom, as best man.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of dark blue flat crepe made in two-piece style with a cluster of white gardenias at the shoulder and with a heavy gold chain at her sole ornament. Her footwear was of ornament. She carried a cluster bouquet of pale pink roses and white sweet peas. Her hat was of the cloche style beaded in colors. Miss Jane Ninde wore a gown of brown velvet with small felt hat and accessories to match.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, a wedding supper was served to thirty guests in the private dining room of the Keenan. The long table where the party was seated was centered with a large basket of Ophelia roses, snapdragon, baby breath and narcissus combined with plumose fern. Tall brass candelabra were arranged on either side and low single die-holders at intervals bearing white lighted tapers. The three-tiered wedding cake and the groom's cake were placed on the buffet.

Following the wedding supper, an informal reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Ninde of Wildwood park. Mr. and Mrs. Howell left later in the evening by motor for Chicago for a short stay. They will be at home after February 1 in their own home near Yellow Springs.

Out-of-town guests for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Howell of Yellow Springs, O. Mr. and Mrs. Folger B. Howell of near Yellow Springs, O. Mr. and Mrs. Howard Smith of Selma, O. and Miss Nora Williams of Pittsburg, Pa.

The bride was a graduate of the Fort Wayne Art School in the class of 1926 and had previously attended secondary school in the Wyoming state preparatory school and the Cranford, N. J., high school. She also attended Antioch college. She has recently held a position in the Dayton Savings and Trust company at Dayton, O. She is a very gifted young woman and has many local friends.

The groom is a graduate of Swarthmore, Pa., and specialized in agriculture at Ohio State university. He is an agricultural dairyman and stock raiser.

An informal tea was held Monday afternoon between the hours of 3 and 5 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Ninde of Wildwood park for the members of the family and the out-of-town guests.

EIGHTIETH BIRTHDAY

CELEBRATED NEW YEAR'S.

One of the most pleasant social events of New Year's Day was the dinner and all-day reception given by Mr. and Mrs. Herman Glass in their beautiful country home east of Jamestown, in honor of the eightieth birthday of their father, Mr. Paschal Glass. About fifty guests were present.

Those from a distance were: Mr. and Mrs. Young of Jeffersonville; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas and daughter and Mr. and Mrs. Jones and son of Bowersville; Mr. and Mrs. Dano Jones of Dayton; Mrs. Richard McClellan and two daughters Jean and Ruth, and Mr. and Mrs. U. G. Hatfield and son Duane of Xenia.

An elegant dinner was served at noon, the birthday cake with its eighty candles forming the center piece. Decorations of pink and white in the dining room added charm to the affair.

"Was fine to be with those you love, With those you know are true; And those that were glad to see you; And O, how nice in after years, When we're farther on our way, To close our eyes and dream sweet dreams."

Of the pleasant time that day. After the noon hour a musical program was given by Miss Thomas, violinist; Duane Hatfield, violinist and Mrs. Richard McClellan at the piano. A most enjoyable social time was enjoyed and the guests departed at a late hour wishing Mr. Glass many more happy birthdays.

Alger Inspired Thousands to Gain Success But Died Penniless Without Realizing His Dreams

Horatio Alger

"ADRIFT IN NEW YORK"

"A NEW YORK BOY"

Who hasn't read the books of Horatio Alger?

Maybe the modern sheik generation would give 'em the laugh, but for two decades or more they were pursued avidly by thousands upon thousands of young Americans.

And there's no denying the fact that his "up-and-coming" stories of grit and perseverance had quite a bit to do with the successes scored by an uncounted number of his juvenile readers.

Alger pursued the same old formula in every tale:

He started his "hero" in as a poor (but honest) lad, and then showed what wide-awakeness and integrity could do, not only in forming character, but in collecting a bank roll.

You'd be surprised at the number of Americans, prominent in public life, who have admitted that the Alger "go-getter" series had a great deal to do with their subsequent rise to success.

The list would comprise such names as Edward R. Bok, William Wrigley, Knute Rockne, Laurence Stallings, Pat Rooney, James R. Quirk and John Drew—yes, and even the notorious bandit, Gerald Chapman, once declared he'd been an intense Alger "fan" in his earlier days, although the name of Chapman hardly bears out the point in question.

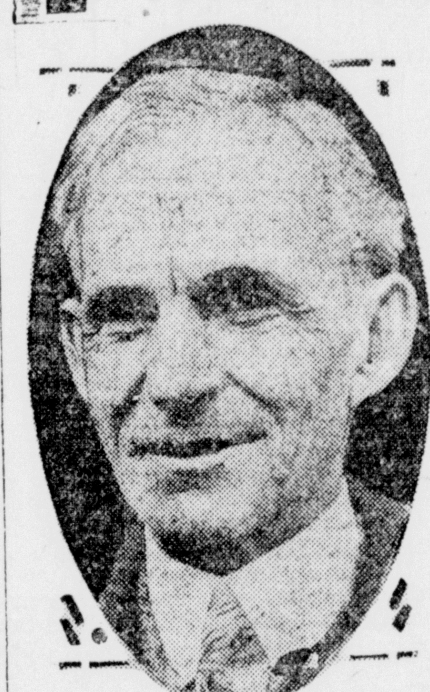

Horatio Alger studied for the ministry, but yielded to the writing urge and gave birth to some 124 books. His biographer tells us he was somewhat of a ladies' man, and, on the other side, spent nearly all his royalties in helping poor boys get a start in life.

Alger could point out the rosy road to success for others, but he couldn't make the grade himself.

He always had the burning desire to write a book that would be hailed as the "Great American Novel." But he went to his grave broke and saddened by the realization that he simply didn't have it in him.

"Al" Sloan vs. "Kid" Ford!
Let 'er go, boys!

For it's the flivver king against General Motors, there's two billion dollars thrown into the ring, and the fight promises to be a sizzler from the first wallop to the last.

It started "way back in the days when G. M. waltzed into the low-priced-car field. Everybody laughed. But Sloan put it over. In three years he jumped his business 450 per cent.—from $300,000,000 in 1921 to one old billion dollars this year.

Then—naturally—everybody figured Ford was through. But his sensational re-entry into the field, his superb showmanship in getting people interested in his new creation, prove that Henry still carries the business punch.

Watch this duel—it's going to be a hummer!

Tales Off The Reel

VOL. II FRIDAY, JANUARY 6, 1928 NO. 9

Our entire organization wishes for you a big and busy 1928, for only through your business can we hope for ours to thrive and prosper.

We unloaded a car of 500 bags of Canadian Oat Feed this week and because we could sell it at the right price we just had 11 bags left. A pretty fair start for the new year if you'll pardon our pride.

Women's clothes were never funnier—if brevity is the soul of wit.

Suitor: "Sir, I would like to marry your daughter."
Father: "I absolutely forbid you to do so."

The Ubiko Milling Co. of Cincinnati has done what no other feed manufacturers have done to our knowledge. They have published a full table of not only the regular protein, fat and fiber analysis but of the DIGESTIBLE protein and total DIGESTIBLE nutrients in each 100 lbs. of all of their feeds. Is that fair, square and above board?

We believe you will agree with us that they are most sincerely working for your interest. This includes the famous Union Grain Dairy and also the 25 per cent Pig and Hog Ration. A wonderful economic balancer for swine.

LINDY'S BIG GEOGRAPHY CLASS

While Mrs. Lindbergh is in Detroit teaching a high school class something about chemistry, her son is teaching the rest of the United States and a large part of the world some geography. His flight to Central America is calling the attention of his many millions of admirers to that group of countries of which the rest of the world knows so little.

While his mother has a class of a few dozen boys and girls, Lindy has a class of a few dozen million who are enthusiastically following him from capital to capital and incidentally learning things about the Central American countries and their peoples which they never knew before.

So Lindy's huge class now knows that Tegucigalpa is the capital of Honduras, that the government of Costa Rica is at San Jose, that the officials at the heads of the various governments are men of splendid ability, and that San Salvador and the other cities have "enchanted" flappers.

These and many other facts of a more valuable sort are being learned by Lindy's huge class. He is creating a new interest in these small nations, and helping millions to broaden their knowledge and understanding, all of which is leading to a closer friendship between the United States and these neighboring countries.

This "Good Will Ambassador" is blazing a new trail which is going to change some pages of history.

REMUS' PLANS FOR FUTURE

George Remus, feeling certain he would be freed, has announced he will give the rest of his life to the noble purpose of fixing it so that every boozier can get all the liquor he wishes without interference from the law. He proposes to give his remaining years to work looking to the repeal of the prohibition amendments in order that the old saloons may return and bring with them the misery and poverty which held sway during their days.

And since Remus has told of his ambition many who doubted that he was insane are beginning to wonder. It seems that a man who has been through the terrible experience he has been through would want to rebuild his life and perform a little constructive work of some use to the world instead of continue his destruction.

But instead of wishing to become a useful, law-abiding citizen, this woman-slayer is determined to do all he can to bring back the thing which has made murderers of so many other men after a majority of the people had decided it had no place in a civilized country.

It is generally believed he has another secret ambition of which he does not talk so much. That is to kill Franklin L. Dodge, jr. He has already declared there would be no moral wrong in that.

The indications now are that the courts will send him to the asylum for the criminal insane, and perhaps that is where he belongs.

The new mayor and chief of police have taken office at Youngstown under a pledge to clean up gambling places. And now the gamblers want to know how much the new officials will bet that they carry out their pledge.

Just to make it absolutely sure, an Ohio couple got two licenses and had two wedding ceremonies. And now what if they should want to get a divorce?

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

PLENTY OF ROOM

Out beyond the stars that we can see, even on the most gorgeous summer night, some five quintillion miles away, there are some more universes full of stars. It would take millions of years to reach the earth. But astronomers have discovered these far-flung universes. For whatever plan the maker of all the universes has for humankind, he has room enough. We can be sure of that.

IN THE LIGHT

The late Judge Gary, head of the Steel Corporation, made no greater contribution to the conduct of big business than when he said "The people have a right to know how the people's business is being carried on. The more they know about it the better it will be for business. Big business, like human life, cannot thrive properly in the dark."

WHAT LIFE IS

It was this same wise Judge Gary who remarked that he was more interested in life than in longevity. He wasn't concerned so much in how long he lived as in how he lived. "Life is never much interested in hanging on," he said. "Life consists of the things we do, the friends we make. The give and take which go to make up human organization. Business. Co-operation. Knowledge. Work. These are things that interest me."

THE WIRY GERM

The forces which prey on life have a discouraging amount of endurance. Continued freezing can not kill the bacteria which cause diphtheria. University of Illinois professors kept a colony of typhoid germs alive in ice cream at four degrees below zero for two years.

The enemies of life, physically and spiritually, are real, active, and awake.

WE HAVE TO TRY HARD

Speaking of the enemies of life, we are confronted constantly with enemies that would break down character. No one can muddle along without effort into a better sort of human being. Drifting never means drifting up. If we are interested in getting into an improved state, physically, mentally, spiritually, we have to make a definite effort. It's a job which has to be worked at.

Slips, falls, failures are to be taken simply as signals to start again.

The Daybook

OF A

New Yorker

—By—
BURTON RASCOE

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Living in New York one is liable to come to believe that there are few new slants on the bootlegging trade, but one New Yorker learned something new while attending the recent meeting of the Aviation Industry in Washington. He was given the phone number of a gentleman who is alleged to supply many senators and congressmen with liquor.

Soon after the phone call had been made, the liquor dispenser appeared at the hotel room and displayed two similar quarts of whiskey. One was priced at $3 a quart and the other at $12. In answer to a question as to which priced whiskey the New Yorker wanted, the latter said that of course he wanted the more expensive kind.

To his surprise the bootlegger said, "Don't be foolish. Both of these bottles contain newly made rye whiskey. They are exactly the same except that the $12 kind has been treated with about $1 worth of chemicals to kill the green taste. Unless you are rich, take the $3 kind."

Clarence Darrow has been doing his stuff in New York as attorney for the defense in the Greco-Carillo murder. The trial was held in the Bronx. A reporter friend of mine tells me that Mr. Darrow got off at a bad start. After a prospective juror had replied that he read three New York newspapers, Mr. Darrow said:

"And there's a paper printed here in this village. Do you read that, too?"

The presiding judge broke in. "Now, really, Mr. Darrow, I hardly think we can call the Bronx a village."

Undoubtedly the judge was right. If the Bronx were a separate city it would rank sixth in the United States in population. The eminent Clarence made a faux pas which he may live to regret. Elephants and residents of the Bronx never forget an injury.

Will Mahoney, the comedian, tells this story about the Irishman just over from the old sod who was in a city where there are laws against jay-walking. (There are none in New York, more's the pity.) The Irishman started to cross the street in traffic. A policeman said, "Stay on the sidewalk. The red light is for the pedestrians. When the red light is on the pedestrians can cross. Remember that: red light for the pedestrians."

The police force has on its payroll, I observe, a policewoman named Wilhelmina Lawless.

FRANCE AND FLIES

Even before he has stepped from the boat at a French port, the newcomer to Europe notes a bit of phenomena that he has heard about but never before seen—cafes where people sit and right out on the sidewalk under an awning and eat food or sip drinks.

How, one immediately wonders, do they get along without fly screens?

Why do flies permit sidewalk dining in France when it would be impossible in America?

Then I learned an astounding fact.

There are no flies in France!

I could only gasp: "How does that happen?"

But nobody can tell me. I must write to my old friend, Dr. Howard, the government entomologist at Washington, and learn why flies have overlooked such a rich field of operations as the sidewalk cafes of France.

Where could they hope to make themselves a greater nuisance? Here they would find virgin territory, a real opportunity. Unless there is some vital defect in the atmosphere, flies could settle down in France and do well.

But perhaps so, as barbecue and other refreshment stands are so slovenly and so numerous along American highways, flies see no need to migrate elsewhere.

Wouldn't it be nice if all the flies and all the picknickers like the country roadsides with their bottles and cooled plates could settle down together on some quiet island where they could let their natural instincts have full sway unmolested!

Not since the first time I had to stand up in school and recite a piece, have I felt so self-conscious and downright silly as when I first attempted to say something in French to a Parisian taxicab driver. All I said was the name of a street and a number, and I had been mentally practicing this all day, but I couldn't have felt any more conspicuous if I had been asked to get up and make a speech in the Chamber of Deputies.

Luckily I discovered about that time that my traveling mate, Dr. Brinkerhoff, speaks French rather fluently. Also he speaks German. Yet he had never once referred to these linguistic accomplishments.

There are too many thin people who like sweets, too; they have the same habit. It isn't so bad in them, if they don't dote the appetite for other foods. One can get over this habit if he will stop it for some length of time.

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

THE WILD AND LUXURIOUS BEAUTY

Although it is very different from the two kinds of beauty I have already discussed in my talks this week, that of form and that of movement, wild and luxurious beauty has a very definite place in its effects upon our feelings, and must have its attention in this discussion.

Tropical forests are typical of this kind of beauty. It is the great abundance of color and foliage, the very richness of it, that stirs our imaginations. It is the superlative, the kind of thing that excites our "ohs" and "ahs." This is the kind of beauty that appeals most exclusively to our emotions and puts our minds at rest.

Wild and luxurious beauty in women is rare, and becomes more and more so as the degree of civilization grows higher. The newer ideal of beauty has carefully trimmed away a great deal of wilderness; it no longer allows beauty to "run wild," except occasionally when it is on a holiday. It is no longer a mark of beauty to have your hair so long that you can sit on it. No, your hair must be neat, well-groomed, and done in a style of classic simplicity. If it is not cut short, it will at least be no longer than an inch or two below your shoulders. If it is too heavy, you will have your barber thin it out in spots. You must not have too much hair to be arranged neatly and becomingly. That is waste, and the Newer Beauty demands a studied simplicity. However, your hair must be sufficiently luxurious in its actual growth on your head to give the best effect in your coiffure.

But we have not lost sight of the attractiveness in a certain amount of wildness in beauty. We are subtle in suggesting the effect of wildness, of luxuriosness without enduring any of the exaggerated effects. Some of the best groomed women achieve a wonderful effect of luxuriosness through the use of exotic make-up and bizarre or oriental colors in dress. The wind-blown bob, which recently had such popularity, was a direct attempt to produce an effect of this kind of beauty. It is, however, losing vogue in favor of the more perfectly groomed coiffure.

In this new age, we don't strive to show luxury in dress by having yards and yards of material, nor luxury in hair by having a great quantity piled on one's head. But we produce the same effect by exquisite texture, warm, rich colors, perfection in every detail. What we have given up in quantity, we must make up for in quality.

The real secret of the effect of wild and luxurious beauty on our emotions is that it expressed vitality, abundance of life, the superlative in nature. The woman who wishes to achieve that kind of beauty (and let me warn you that it does not suit every type), must be fearless in her dress and in her make-up. She must apply her rouge with a lavish hand and use every device to bring out the beauty of her eyes—eyeshadow, Persian eyeshadow on her lashes, perhaps a touch of rouge in the inner corners, and a short pencil line drawn out from the outer corners toward the temples to enlarge their apparent size. Her lips should be vividly rouged. Her hands must be perfectly groomed, elastic and expressive, with the nails above criticism.

In my talk today I have attempted to explain the wild and luxurious beauty, and the way it is expressed in chic women of today. Tomorrow I shall discuss "The Pretty Kind of Beauty."

A Good Way to Stop That Craving

While I was spending part of my vacation at Battle Creek last summer, I gave a talk to the guests at the sanitarium on reducing. One of the questions asked me was: Why is it that fat people always like sweets? I didn't answer it very well, I realize now. What I said was that the fat person doesn't like sweets because he is fat, although he may like sweets. I should have added that the real answer was that he likes sweets because he has the sweet habit. There are too many thin people who like sweets, too; they have the same habit. It isn't so bad in them, if they don't dote the appetite for other foods. One can get over this habit if he will stop it for some length of time.

I'm reminded of this talk by the following letter:

"Dear Doctor: For many weeks I have tried to find time to write to you, but like dieting, it was put off until tomorrow. I am, or rather was, one of the F. F. F. The first of February, 1927, I went for a physical examination; while I knew I was disgustingly fat, I was horrified when I found I tipped the scales at 215. I went from the doctor's office and got your book on reducing, and started that very day.

months after I started, I was down to 148, a loss of 67 pounds, at about the rate of two pounds a week. I feel better now than I ever did before. And as to my looks! My friends don't know me. I used to wear a 46, and now—God bless me I wear a 36! I never was contented with my condition; I had no respect for myself, for I suppose my subconscious mind knew I was a slave to food. My brain must have been getting fat and dull, as was my body, for my mind is very much cleared now.

"My greatest difficulty was not giving up food, but battling my family and friends. However, they are all L. H. P. fans now, and all who know how unhappy I was, are rejoicing with me.

"Will say in closing that I had to stick to from 1,000 to 1,200 C for my daily allowance. I took 15 minutes exercise every day, followed by a tepid shower. I kept one size 48 dress, and when the craving for sweets came on me, I would put on this dress and be so encouraged by the way it draped me, that I could go hungry for a week. I give you my everlasting gratitude.—Mrs. B."

This letter is a whole article in itself. I won't comment upon it, except to ask you to notice that the loss was but two pounds a week, the daily exercise, the battle with friends and family, and the mental as well as physical improvement.

We have the condensed instructions on reducing similar to those that are given in my book which Mrs. B. followed. You can secure these instructions by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope and 10 cents in coin (to cover cost of printing and handling).

I'm grateful to you, Mrs. B., for writing me of your good results, and many others will be also, for I know your letter will inspire them to follow your footsteps.

Liver in Gravy—One pound liver, beef or pork, one egg, beaten, two tablespoons flour, one teaspoonful salt, one-eighth teaspoonful pepper, four tablespoons drippings, three cups hot water, one slice onion, minced; buy loaf, few drops Worcestershire sauce. Sprinkle slices of liver with salt and pepper, dredge with flour, dip in beaten egg diluted with two tablespoons of cold water, and again in flour. Brown in drippings, then add hot water and rest of seasonings, cover and simmer one hour. Remove meat, thicken the liquid in the pan.

Liver Soup for Vegetables—One pound liver, ground, three cups water, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half cup carrots, grated; one-half cup potato, grated; one-half cup onion, grated; one-half cup celery, chopped; one tablespoon parsley, chopped. Heat water, add salt, then liver, cover well and bring to boil, then reduce heat and simmer for one-half hour. Add vegetables except parsley, and cook again for fifteen minutes or until vegetables are tender. Add more water as needed. Add parsley and serve.

Liver Rolls—One pound liver, sliced, drippings for browning, one teaspoonful salt, one-eighth teaspoonful pepper.

Stuffing for Rolls—Two cups dry bread crumbs, one cup meat, stock, one-half teaspoon parsley, chopped; one teaspoonful celery, dried; one-half onion, chopped; two slices bacon, chopped; one-half teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper. Wipe sliced liver, parboil five minutes and drain. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and place a spoonful of stuffing on top of each slice. Roll each slice and fasten with a toothpick or string. Scar the rolls in hot bacon fat, add a small amount of water, cover tightly and simmer until liver is tender, about half an hour. If desired, make a gravy of the liquid in the pan, or serve with a separate sauce. To make the stuffing, cube bacon and fry, add onion and brown. Meanwhile soak bread crumbs in liquid, add seasonings and combine with bacon and onion.

One side or the other will get desperately the worst of it. The navy has furnished its own record for four of the most disastrous years in its peace time history. If unable to shift the responsibility for them onto the other shoulders, it will have a mighty difficult job now to prove that they weren't as bad as Wilbur himself says they were.

On the other hand, the congressional fault-finders have finally prodded their varmint into coming right out of his hole, with blood in his eye. If they fail to "git" him, he shows every sign of eating 'em up.

There's no question that most of the big men, in the army and navy alike, do honestly consider that their two services are in awful shape from lack of sufficient financial nourishment.

Ever since the war, they contend, they've been allowed next to nothing to live on, except what they had left over then.

For awhile there was a good deal of it, so they didn't fare so badly, but now, they complain, nearly everything's used up or spoiled, and they're almost starved to death.

The hopeless part of it is that laymen never can tell just how much merit there is in these military folk's lamentations. As experts, they ought to know, and perhaps they're right, yet when they're given what they want, they're insatiable.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—A tremendous rumour over the navy is due before this session of congress ends. That's evident. The outlook gets uglier every day.

The S-4 disaster would insure trouble, all by itself, but there's plenty more to go with it.

The Langley explosion, right on the S-4's heels, came just at a time to attract the maximum of attention. The row about Admiral Magruder's charges isn't by any means settled yet.

Now comes Secretary Wilbur, reporting accidents involving ten destroyers, eight submarines, three cruisers, two battleships, a target vessel, a minesweeper and a collier, in the last four years, at a cost of $6 lives and nearly 20 millions in damages.

This report by Wilbur, made to congress at such a moment, almost suggests a determination to force a fight; to compel a deeper delving into the naval situation than might otherwise have developed. It wasn't necessary for the secretary to go away four years to make out as bad a case as he could.

Of course it isn't possible that the navy head is trying to convict his own department of inefficiency. The only other guess it seems reasonable to make is that he intends to blame congress—for cutting down his appropriations to a point where deterioration, in equipment and personnel, has been unavoidable.

To be sure, Wilbur isn't the pugnacious type of official whom it's easy to think of as sallying out into the open, to smite his critics, hip and thigh, before they're ready for him.

A mild man, he usually doesn't smite until he's smitten, and he generally pulls his punches even when he's given what they want, they're insatiable.

Still, it's hard to see anything in his present tactics but recognition of the old principle that an attack's the best defense. There's the chance, too, that some of the scraggy old admirals have stirred him up, for once, into a real temper.

It is generally believed he has another secret ambition of which he does not talk so much. That is to kill Franklin L. Dodge, jr. He has already declared there would be no moral wrong in that.

The indications now are that the courts will send him to the asylum for the criminal insane, and perhaps that is where he belongs.

The new mayor and chief of police have taken office at Youngstown under a pledge to clean up gambling places. And now the gamblers want to know how much the new officials will bet that they carry out their pledge.

Just to make it absolutely sure, an Ohio couple got two licenses and had two wedding ceremonies. And now what if they should want to get a divorce?

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

PLENTY OF ROOM

Out beyond the stars that we can see, even on the most gorgeous summer night, some five quintillion miles away, there are some universes full of stars. It would take millions of years to reach the earth. But astronomers have discovered these far-flung universes. For whatever plan the maker of all the universes has for humankind, he has room enough. We can be sure of that.

IN THE LIGHT

The late Judge Gary, head of the Steel Corporation, made no greater contribution to the conduct of big business than when he said "The people have a right to know how the people's business is being carried on. The more they know about it the better it will be for business. Big business, like human life, cannot thrive properly in the dark."

WHAT LIFE IS

It was this same wise Judge Gary who remarked that he was more interested in life than in longevity. He wasn't concerned so much in how long he lived as in how he lived. "I was never much interested in hanging on," he said. "Life consists of the things we do, the friends we make. The give and take which go to make up human organization. Business. Co-operation. Knowledge. Work. These are things that interest me."

THE WIRY GERM

The forces which prey on life have a discouraging amount of endurance. Continued freezing can not kill the bacteria which cause typhoid fever. University of Illinois professors kept a colony of typhoid germs alive in ice cream at four degrees below zero for two years.

The enemies of life, physically and spiritually, are real, active, idle awake.

WE HAVE TO TRY HARD

Speaking of the enemies of life, we are confronted constantly with enemies that would break down character. No one can muddle along without effort into a better sort of human being. Drifting never means drifting up. If we are interested in getting into an improved state, physically, mentally, spiritually, we have to make a definite effort. It's a job which has to be worked at.

Slips, falls, failures are to be taken simply as signals to start again.

The Daybook

OF A

New Yorker

—By—
BURTON RASCOE

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Living in New York one is liable to come to believe that there are few new slants on the bootlegging trade, but one New Yorker learned something new while attending the recent meeting of the Aviation Industry in Washington. He was given the phone number of a gentleman who is alleged to supply many senators and congressmen with liquor.

Soon after the phone call had been made, the liquor dispenser appeared at the hotel room and displayed two similar quarts of whiskey. One was priced at $3 a quart and the other at $12. In answer to a question as to which priced whiskey the New Yorker wanted, the latter said that of course he wanted the more expensive one.

To the surprise the bootlegger said, "Don't be foolish. Both of these bottles contain newly made rye whiskey. They are exactly the same except that the $12 kind has been treated with about $1 worth of chemicals to kill the green taste. Unless you are rich, take the $3 kind."

Clarence Darrow has been doing his stuff in New York as attorney for the defense in the Greco-Carillo murder. (There are no more in the Bronx.) A reporter friend of mine tells me that Mr. Darrow got off at a bad start. After a prospective juror had replied that he read three New York newspapers, Mr. Darrow said:

"And there's a paper printed here in this village. Do you read that, too?"

The presiding judge broke in, "Now, really, Mr. Darrow, I hardly think we can call the Bronx a village."

Undoubtedly the judge was right. If the Bronx were a separate city it would rank sixth in the United States in population. The eminent Clarence made a faux pas which he may live to regret. Elephants and residents of the Bronx never forget an injury.

Will Mahoney, the comedian, tells this story about the Irishman, just over from the old sod who was in a city where there are laws against jay-walking. (There are none in New York, more the pity.) The Irishman started to cross the street in traffic. A policeman said, "Stay on the sidewalk. The red light is for the pedestrians. When the red light is on the pedestrians can cross. Remember that: red light for the pedestrians."

The Irishman stayed on the sidewalk for about ten minutes when he made up his mind to ask a question which he did not seem to be answering itself: "What light do you turn on when Catholics can cross?"

The police force has on its payroll, observe, a policeman named Wilhelm Lawtess.

FRANCE AND FLIES

Even before he has stepped from the boat at a French port, the newcomer to Europe notes a bit of phenomena that he has heard about but never before seen—cane flies where people sit and right out on the sidewalk under an awning and eat food or sip drinks.

How, one immediately wonders, do they get along without fly screens?

Why do flies permit sidewalk dining in France when it would be impossible in America?

Then I learned an astounding fact.

There are no flies in France!

I could only gasp: "How does that happen?"

But nobody can tell me. I must write to my friend, Dr. Howard, the government entomologist at Washington, and learn why flies have overlooked such a rich field of operations as the sidewalk cafes of France.

Where could they hope to make their lives a greater nuisance? Here they would find virgin territory, a real opportunity. Unless there is some vital defect in the atmosphere, flies could settle down in France and do well.

But perhaps so long as barbecue and other refreshment stands are so densely packed and so numerous along American highways, flies see no need to migrate elsewhere.

Wouldn't it be nice if all the flies and all the picnicers who litter the country roadsides with their bottles and soiled papers were so closely packed together on some lovely island where they could let their natural instincts have full sway unmolested?

Not since the first time I had to stand up in school and recite a piece, have I felt so self-conscious and downright silly as when I first attempted to say something in French to a Parisian taxicab driver. All I said was the name of a street and a number, and I had been mentally practicing this all day, but I couldn't have felt any more conspicuous if I had been asked to get up and make a speech in the Chamber of Deputies.

Luckily I discovered about that time that my traveling mate, Dr. Brinkerhoff, speaks French rather fluently. Also he speaks German. Yet he had never once referred to these linguistic accomplishments. I can't understand practicing this all day, but I couldn't have felt any more conspicuous if I had been asked to get up and make a speech in the Chamber of Deputies.

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

THE WILD AND LUXURIOUS BEAUTY

Although it is very different from the two kinds of beauty I have already discussed in my talks this week, that of form and that of movement, wild and luxurious beauty has a very definite place in its effects upon our feelings, and must have its attention in this discussion.

Tropical forests are typical of this kind of beauty. It is the great abundance of color and foliage, the very richness of it, that stirs our imaginations. It is the superlative, the kind of thing that excites our "ohs" and "ahs." This is the kind of beauty that appeals most exclusively to our emotions and puts our minds at rest.

Wild and luxurious beauty in women is rare, and becomes more and more so as the degree of civilization grows higher. The newer ideal of beauty has carefully trimmed away a great deal of wilderness; it no longer allows beauty to "run wild," except occasionally when it is on a holiday.

It is no longer a matter of having beauty, you will have your barber trim it out in spots. You must not have too much hair to be arranged neatly and becomingly. That is waste, and the New Beauty demands a studied simplicity. However, your hair must be sufficient to make a man's eyes grow on your head to give the best effect in your coiffure.

But we have not lost sight of the attractiveness in a certain amount of wildness in beauty. We are subtle in suggesting the effect of wildness, of luxuriousness without enduring any of the exaggerated effects. Some of the best groomed women achieve a wonderful effect of luxuriousness through the use of exotic make-up and bizarre or oriental colors in dress. The wind-blown bob, which recently had such popularity, was a direct attempt to produce an effect of this kind of beauty. It is, however, losing vogue in favor of the more perfectly groomed coiffure.

In this new age, we don't strive to show luxury in dress by having yards and yards of material, nor luxury in hair by having a great quantity piled on one's head. But we produce the same effect by exquisite texture, warm, rich colors, perfection in every detail. What we have given up in quantity, we must make up for in quality.

The real secret of the effect of wild and luxurious beauty on our emotions is that it expressed vitality, abundance of life, the superlative in nature. The woman who wishes to have beauty of this kind (and let me warn you that it does not suit every type), must be fearless in her dress and in her make-up. She must apply her every device to bring out the beauty of her eyes—eyeshadow, mascara, eyelashes. Perhaps a touch of rouge in the inner corners, and a short pencil line drawn out from the outer corners toward the temples to enlarge their apparent size. Her lips should be vividly groomed. Her hands must be perfectly rounded, her feet and expressive, with the nails above criticism.

In my talk today I have attempted to explain the wild and luxurious beauty, and the way it is expressed in chic women of today. Tomorrow I shall discuss "The Pretty Kind of Beauty."

Diet and Health

Answers to Correspondents

A Good Way to Stop That Craving While I was spending part of last week at Battle Creek last summer, I gave a talk to the guests at the sanitarium on reducing. One of the questions asked me was: Why is it that fat people always like sweets? I didn't answer it very well, I realize now. What I said was that the fat person doesn't like sweets because he is fat, although he may like sweets. I should have added that the real answer was that he likes sweets because he has the sweet habit. There are too many thin people who like sweets, too; they have the sweet habit. It isn't so bad in them if it doesn't cloy the appetite for other foods. One can get over this habit if he will stop it for some length of time.

I'm reminded of this talk by the following letter: "Dear Doctor: For many weeks I have tried to find time to write to you, but like dieting, it was put off until tomorrow. I am, or rather was, one of the F. F. F. The first of February, 1927, I went for a physical examination; while I knew I was disgustingly fat, I was horrified when I found I tipped the scales at 215. I am 38 years old, and have carried this excess baggage since I was 22, always hating myself and nearly everyone else. I went from the doctor's office and got your book on reducing, and started that very day. On the first of October, eight months after I started, I was down to 148, a loss of 67 pounds, at about the rate of two pounds a week. I feel better now than I ever did before. And as to my looks! My friends don't know me. I used to wear a 46, and now—God bless me I wear a 36! I never was contented with my condition; I had no respect for myself, for I suppose my subconscious mind knew I was a slave to food. My brain must have been getting fat and dull, as was my body, for my mind is very much cleared now.

"My greatest difficulty was not giving up food, but battling my family and friends. However, they are all H. P. fans now, and all who know how unhappy I was, are rejoicing with me.

"Will say in closing that I had to stick to from 1,000 to 1,200 C for my daily allowance. I took 15 minutes exercise every day, followed by a tepid shower. I kept one size 48 dress, and when the craving for sweets came on me, I would put on this dress and be so encouraged by the way it draped me, that I could go hungry for a week. I give you my everlasting gratitude.—Mrs. B.

This letter is a whole article in itself. I won't comment upon it, except to ask you to notice that the loss was but two pounds a week, the daily exercise, the battle with friends and family, and the mental as well as physical improvement.

We have the condensed instructions

Household Hints

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Liver in Gravy—One pound liver, beef or pork, one egg, beaten, two tablespoons flour, one teaspoonful salt, one-eighth teaspoonful pepper, four tablespoons drippings, three cups hot water, one slice onion, minced; bay leaf, few drops Worcestershire sauce. Sprinkle slices of liver with salt and pepper, dredge with flour, dip in beaten egg diluted with two tablespoons of cold water, and again in flour. Brown in drippings, then add hot water and rest of seasonings, cover and simmer one hour. Remove meat, thicken the liquid in the pan.

Liver Soup for Vegetables—One pound liver, ground, three cups water, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half cup carrots, grated; one-half cup potato, grated; one-half cup onion, grated; one-half cup celery, chopped; one tablespoon parsley, chopped. Heat water, add salt, then liver, cover well and bring to boil, then reduce heat and simmer for one-half hour. Add vegetables except parsley, and cook again for fifteen minutes or until vegetables are tender. Add more water as needed. Add parsley and serve.

Liver Rolls—One pound liver, sliced, drippings for browning, one teaspoonful salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper.

Stuffing for Rolls—Two cups dry bread crumbs, one cup meat stock, one-half teaspoon parsley, chopped; one teaspoonful celery, dried; one-half onion, chopped; two slices bacon, chopped; one-half teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper. Wipe sliced liver, parboil five minutes and drain. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and place a spoonful of stuffing on top of each slice. Roll each slice and fasten with a toothpick or string. Sear the rolls in hot bacon fat, add a small amount of water, cover tightly and simmer until liver is tender, about half an hour. If desired, make a gravy of the liquid in the pan, serve with a separate sauce. To make the stuffing, cube bacon and fry, add onion and brown. Meanwhile soak bread crumbs in liquid, add seasonings and combine with bacon and onion.

Directions on reducing similar to those that are given in my book which Mrs. B. followed. You can secure these instructions by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope and 10 cents in coin (to cover cost of printing and handling).

I'm grateful to you, Mrs. B., for writing me of your good results, and many others will be also, for I know your letter will inspire them to follow your footsteps.

Tomorrow: Sleeping Sickness.

NOTE:—Please send ten cents in COIN and fully self-addressed stamped envelope, with orders for instructions on reducing and gaining.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—A tremendous rumormongering in the navy is due before this session of congress ends. That's evident. The outlook gets uglier every day.

The S-4 disaster would insure trouble, all by itself, but there's plenty more to go with it.

The Langley explosion, right on the heels of the S-4, came just at a time to attract the maximum of attention. The row about Admiral Langley's charges isn't by any means settled yet.

Now comes Secretary Wilbur, reporting accidents involving ten destroyers, eight submarines, three cruisers, two battleships, a target vessel, a minesweeper and a collier in the last four years, at a cost of $6 lives and nearly 20 millions in damages.

This report by Wilbur, made to congress at such a moment, almost suggests a determination to force a fight to compel a deeper delving into the naval situation than might otherwise have developed. It wasn't necessary for the secretary to go away four years to make out as bad a case as he could.

Of course it isn't possible that the navy head is trying to convict his own department of inefficiency. The only other guess it seems reasonable to make is that he intends to blame congress—for cutting down his appropriations to a point where deterioration of equipment and personnel has been unavoidable.

To be sure, Wilbur isn't the pugnacious type of official whom it's easy to think of as salting out into the open, to smite his critics, hip and thigh, before they're ready for him.

A mild man, he usually doesn't smite until he's smitten, and he generally pulls his punches even hen. Still, it's hard to see anything in his present tactics but recognition of the old principle that an attack's the best defense. There's the chance, too, that some of his scrappy old admirals have stirred him up, for once, into a real temper.

One side or the other will get desperately the worst of it.

The navy has furnished its own record for four of the most disastrous years in its peace-time history. It's unable to shift the responsibility for them onto the other shoulders, it will have a mighty difficult job now to prove that they weren't as bad as Wilbur himself says they were.

On the other hand, the congressional fault-finders have finally ridden out of his hole, with blood in his eye. If they fail to "git" him, he shows every sign of eating 'em up.

There's no question that most of the big men, in the army and navy alike, do honestly consider that their two services are in awful shape from lack of sufficient financial nourishment.

Ever since the war, they contend, they've been allowed next to nothing to live on, except what they had left over then. For awhile there was a good deal of it, so they didn't fare so badly, but now, they complain, nearly everything's used up or spoiled, and they're almost starved to death.

The hopeless part of it is that laymen never can tell just how much merit there is in these military folk's lamentations. As experts, they ought to know, and perhaps they're right; yet when they're given what they want, they're insatiable.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

ANOTHER OLD-FASHIONED GIRL

Such a sweet little letter was among those I opened today, that I am going to share it with you. All you boys who are so sure there are no sweet girls left who did not "pet" and "worst," must now be convinced that they are wrong.

"My Dear Mrs. Lee: I know that no one loves your column as I. I read it every day and some of the writers are exactly like myself. I live on a farm, have a nice home, and still I am lonesome. I like all clean, wholesome sports, like to read clean books. I spend most of my spare time reading. I don't have very much time, only at night, as my mother is dead and I try in every way possible to fill her place in our home, only my father and I. I would be glad indeed to know 'An Old-Fashioned Fellow.' His ideas are exactly the same as mine. I'm saving my first kiss for my Prince Charming."

A very sweet letter from a very sweet girl, my dear. And I'm sorry I can't introduce an old-fashioned fellow to you, but I would have to be very sure that he really was a fine chap, and one can hardly do that by letter. You know, the best I can do is hope that you will meet a real prince soon, one who will appreciate the treasure he has won.

So sorry I did not answer your letter before, "Waiting." It was buried in a mass of mail. It was not necessary to give the girl a present under the circumstances, but a box of candy would have been nice if you felt you could afford it.

The next writer is in practically the same boat. She is sure, but is afraid, her "boy friend" no longer loves her. "Dear Mrs. Lee: I am in great distress. I have been going with a young man for two years, and now he has left for another city. He said he was going to take himself in his work. I told him I believed that he was going because he has grown tired of keeping company with me. We correspond, but I only get one letter from him a week and I write to him nearly every night. Now, dear Mrs. Lee, could you please give me a little advice?"

"Loneliness." Yes, I could, loneliness, and I know you will follow it. Only write to him once a week—answer his letters—and stop worrying as to whether he loves you or not. You should be glad he wants to make good in business and encourage him all you can. Be jolly, go out with your friends and stop moaning. People who are always thinking others don't love them have inferior complexes. They are very exasperating to their friends. Snap out of it!

Peter's Adventure

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

A BIRD NIGHTMARE

Peter was anxious to see for himself just what was going on in the henlock tree, and he walked steadily toward it, the young Blue Jay chuckling with delight, hopping along in the snow at his side. "D'Jay! D'Jay! How mad old Screech Owl is!" exclaimed the Blue Jay. "The family are making him so excited that I'll bet he will not be able to sleep for the rest of the day. It serves him right, too."

"What has the fellow ever done to you to make you dislike him so, Blue Jay?" asked Peter, curiously. "You fly about in the daytime and he travels in the darkness, and I should never think that he would interfere with you at all. Feathers rise to think of it."

"Why, no very big! I was so scared that I hopped right out of a sound sleep into the edge of the nest, and if I had been a father's length taller Screech Owl would have knocked me to the ground. One never knows where the fat fellow is or where he is going. Away off in the distance one hears his sneezing and, and then the first thing one knows, 'swish,' 'swish,' and he is upon you. B-r-r-r!" makes my pin feathers rise to think of it."

"I don't wonder!" said the boy, laughing. "I have had nightmares myself and I know what a horrible thing it is to be frightened out of your sleep. But of course I only imagined I saw things—there was

"Pooh! It takes something real to scare me," remarked Blue Jay boastfully. "And Screech Owl is real, all right as you would find, your sorrow, if you were a little bird or a mouse, for instance, and happened to be where his great eyes could see you."

"What would he do?" questioned Peter. "Anything very dreadful—more than just frighten you to pieces?"

"You just bet he would!" exclaimed Blue Jay, "and you would wish that you had chosen safer sleeping quarters. Before you had done more than heard his horrible screech and caught a glimpse of his winged shape, down upon you he would pounce, and the next thing you know you would find your self inside of his fat stomach. There you would stay until you came out of his mouth, again as an 'owl pellet,' but then you wouldn't be any good at all, for the best part of you would not be digested."

"What on earth are you talking about!" exclaimed Peter, amazed. "If Screech Owl had eaten me up, how could I be alive again, and what do you mean by an owl pellet?"

"Who said that you'd be alive, Boy?" jeered Blue Jay. "I didn't! As for an owl pellet, when you have time, go look under the trees where Screech Owl roosts! You will find plenty of them! On the ground. Maybe if you ask old Screech Owl questions he will tell you about them himself. Oh, pshaw! We are too late for the fun. There go the Blue Jays, and look! They are chasing a sparrow hawk!"

Next—"Plucky Young Sparrow Hawk."

SCHOOL COURT LOOP WILL BEGIN SECOND ROUND SATURDAY

Second round of play in the Intra-City Grade School Basketball League is scheduled for Saturday morning at Central High School gymnasium.

Spring Hill 4, which won its opening round game from McKinley 4A by a score of 9 to 3, will meet McKinley 4B at 8 a. m.

Having lost its first round engagement to McKinley 5A by the close margin of 7 to 6, Spring Hill fifth graders will try to show a reversal of form in their second round game with McKinley 5B at 9 o'clock.

The third game of the round brings together Spring Hill 6 and McKinley 6B. Spring Hill sixth graders won their first game from McKinley 6A by the lopsided count of 24 to 1 and hope to duplicate against the "B" quintet from the same school.

McKinley 4B, 5B and 6B teams drew byes the opening round and will be playing their initial games Saturday. McKinley 4A, 5A and 6A teams will be idle the second round.

McKinley 6B is the defending champion, having won the title last season.

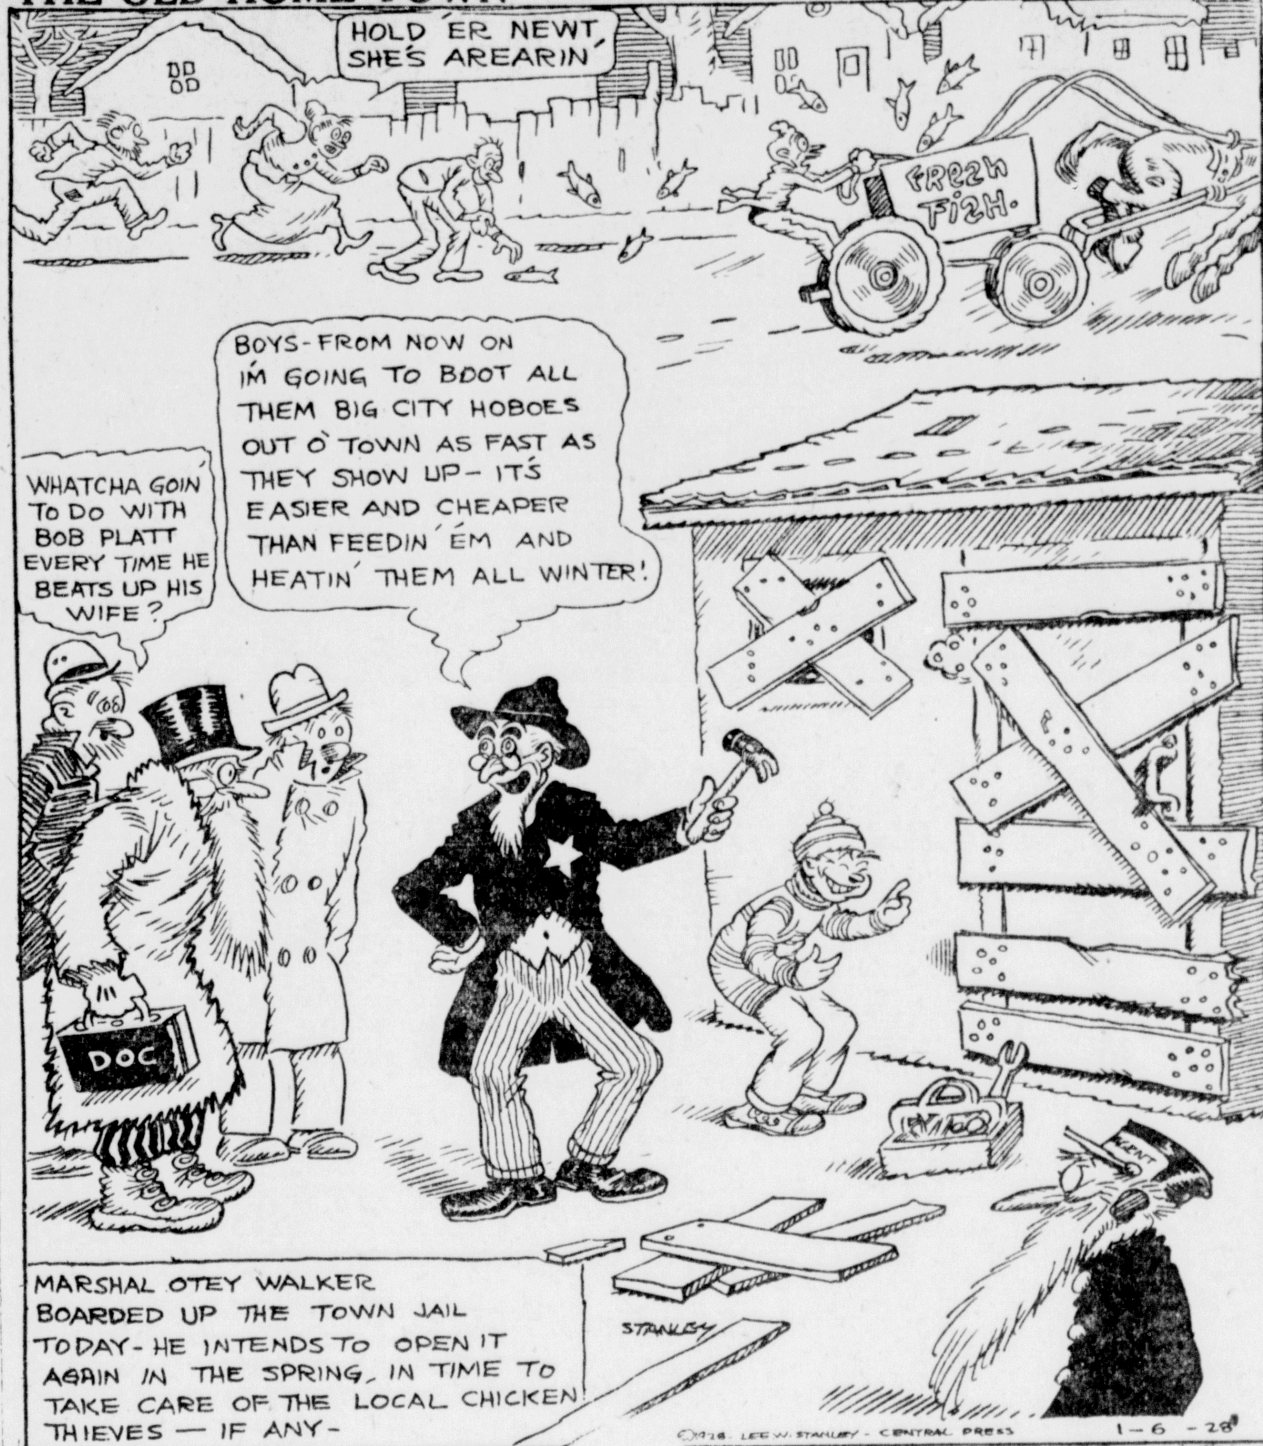

FAMOUS FIVE WINS FROM WIZARDS HERE

The Famous Auto Five, an independent Xenia basketball team, opened its season auspiciously by trouncing the Xenia Wizards 27 to 23 in a contest crowded with thrills at the Tabernacle Thursday night. The Wizards led 16 to 13 at the half.

Vannorsdall and Robert Gegner were high point men for the winners. Muterspaugh and Strowbridge were outstanding in the Wizards' lineup.

The Famous Auto Five will meet the Alpha K. of P. quintet on the Alpha floor next Tuesday night. Alpha will appear at the Tabernacle for a third game with the Wizards next Thursday night.

BOBBY JONES AND TOMMY ARMOUR FEATURED MONTH OF BRIDES

THE poor showing of Bobby Jones and the victory of Tommy Armour in the U. S. open golf championship tourney were the high spots of the month of brides. Atlanta Bobby started off in the open with a score of 76. His second round found him with a score of 72, and he wound up the tourney with a total of 309 strokes. His showing throughout the play was poor enough to worry his most ardent supporters. It was his worst score in an open event since he broke in. He had shot a 303 at Columbia in 1921.

Coincident with Bobby's blowup came a popular victory for Tommy Armour, game little Scotchman, carrying the wounds of war. Armour and Harry Cooper, Los Angeles tied, ended the regulation 72 holes tied, with 301. Cooper finished his last round ahead of Armour. When the little Scot faced

Washington C. H. in an inter-city match at the Recreation Park on Thursday night, the visitors compiled a three-game total of 2,645, while Xenia totalled 2,641. Jones was high man for Washington with a series of 590 while Highley led Xenia with 561. Troy will appear in this city for a match game Friday night. Box scores:

TOMMY MILLIGAN WAS MINUS MORE THAN HIS H'S IN HIS MIX-UP WITH MICKEY WALKER.

ed the last six holes he seemed hopelessly beaten. Then he found his stride. Playing the next five holes under par he came to the last hole to face the problem of shooting a birdie three to the Cooper's score. He met it.

In the playoff that followed Armour and Cooper came to the third green with the defense by Tommy. He cut that lead one on the next hole and then tied Cooper on the fifteenth with a putt of 30 feet. The 18 holes found him three strokes to the good. He had gained one on each of the last three.

The other outstanding events of the month were the defense by Mickey Walker of his middleweight title in England and the victory of Columbia's crew in the Poughkeepsie regatta.

Mickey was the first champion to risk his title in England since Freddy Welsh three in 1913. Walker took Tommy Milligan, recognized as the most promising fighter in Europe and European middleweight champ. The invading champ dropped Milligan for the full count in the tenth round. The victory was well received by British experts and raised Walker's stock in America.

The other ring event of note was the defeat of Pete Latzo, welterweight king and the man who had knocked Walker off the welterweight perch. Latzo, whose worth as a champ had been questioned, was defeated decisively by Joe Dun, a 15-round bout in New York. Jack Dempsey and Jack Sharkey signed articles for their bout, which took place later in the summer.

Baseball fans had two trades to fan over in addition to the runaway race in the American League and the close fight in the National.

First the Cubs traded Jimmy Cooney and Tony Kaufman for lowly Phillies for pitcher Harold such a howl that the club tried to call off the deal and even asked Judge Landis' aid, claiming that Kaufmann was not in condition to pitch. David Harum tactics and irresponsibility of the messenger boy who delivered the telegrams. The trade stuck—and Carlson proceeded to help lift the Cubs within shouting distance of the pennant for a time.

Carlson. Philadelphia fans raised

John McGraw traded pitchers McQuillan and Greenfield and shortstop Eddie Farrell to the Braves for Benton, Catcher Taylor and infielder Thomas. Farrell proved to be the one bright spot in the Brave machine. McGraw drew thirteen crates of selected raspberries.

Whiskery, Kentucky Derby winner, was forced to taste the dust of Buddy Bauer's heels in the rich Fairmount Derby and at East St. Louis, Ill.

Bill Tilden, whose play abroad had been one of the sensations of the season, continued to point himself for the cup matches, defeating Henri Cochet in the semi-finals of the hard court tourney at St. Cloud. Then he faced La Coste. Their contest will live long in tennis history. La Coste won in a contest that went five sets—the last of which went to 20 games, La Coste winning, 11-9.

Helen Wills announced her return to form, after a part season layoff, by trouncing Miss Billie Trapscott, South African star, in two love sets in 18 minutes at Beckenham, Eng.

A few days later Betty Nuthall, sixteen-year-old British girl, startled the tennis world by defeating

Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory in the opening play of the Wimbledon tourney.

Elizabeth Ryan, sister Californian of Helen, added to the interest in the tourney by defeating Mrs. Kitty McKane Godfrey, considered England's greatest net star since Ryan's return to the U. S.

Great Britain's invasion of the U. S. in quest of the Ryder cup, golf prize, was a dismal failure. George Duncan saved his fellow countrymen from suffering a complete rout by defeating Joe Turnesa with a beautiful putt for a birdie three on the 36th hole of their match. Bill McIlhennay won the deciding match of the series earlier in the play by beating Archie Compston.

Sports Done Brown

The cry is raised by major league magnates now that a big league team must have farms to produce its good material—that the death of good material available prompts, if it doesn't make necessary, such action.

The Cleveland American League club, under new ownership and management, follows its failure to obtain new playing strength by trade or purchase with the statement that it must make minor league connections before it can be assured of a source of supply of material.

It is pointed out that the St. Louis Cardinals and the other clubs that have "farms" are benefitting thereby.

All well and good. But at the same time we read the news that Jimmy Reese and Lynn Lary of the Oakland club of the Pacific Coast League are going to the big show at a price around $200,000—via the open market.

The New York Yankees have an option on the pair at $125,000 and the Chicago Cubs are bidding around $250,000 for their services.

Somebody's going to get those two beauties. Not through any working connections with the Oakland club—interlocking directorates or other attachments. But by the simple process of going to Oakland with a sack full of money and laying enough dough on the line to buy the two.

This would make it appear as though there is some other reason besides the alleged scarcity of playing material for the failure of some clubs to acquire new material—and would also point to the real reason for the growth of the "farm" idea.

The presence of two or three minor league clubs as a feeding ground for ball players will eliminate the necessity of paying good money for young players—while netting the owners a fair dividend on the minor league franchise with a good break in luck.

One doesn't have to give $250,000 for two baseball players when one owns the players. The growing boy becomes a two-way asset in fact. His popularity as a "kid" draws the crowds to the bushes and his advent with a major league outfit draws more attention. What could be sweeter.

It's all right to point to the development of the big league "farm" idea as a measure of necessity but as a matter of fact it is primarily a money-making idea. Why try to cover that up? It's just plain business.

What happens to the individual minor league club owners who can't hook up with major league clubs is another matter.

The New York Yankees long have been rated as a slugging team and in the last campaign moved down the opposition by the mighty power of their bats.

Therefore the pitching averages issued recently are interesting. They show that the Yankee pitchers in shut-out victories.

In other words the Yankees had the pitching—occasionally at least. Every club in the league, with the exception of the Athletics, suffered third baselists at some time during the season. The Boston Red Sox went runless three different times before Yankee pitching. Detroit, Cleveland and the White Sox were held scoreless on two occasions. The St. Louis Browns, although beaten some twenty-one shutouts in every game but one, Washington managed to score in every game against the Yankees with one exception.

It is also an interesting fact that nine of these eleven whitewash feats were performed by the veteran members of the team. Ruether, Pennock, Hoyt and Shocker. Ruether checked the Red Sox twice and halted the Tigers once. Hoyt whitewashed Chicago. Washington and Cleveland. Shocker paralyzed the Indians and the Red Sox, and Pennock held the White Sox scoreless one game.

So, what? The list by shutting out the Browns and Tigers respectively.

DIES AT INFIRMARY

George Pressinger, 81, Xenia, died Friday morning at 11 o'clock at the Greene County Infirmary, from heart trouble. He had been in ill health more than a year. The deceased lived at the infirmary four or five years. One brother, address unknown, survives. Funeral arrangements have not been made.

BOWLING

The Downtown Country Club stretched its advantage in the City Bowling League to three full games by defeating The Brown Furnace Co. quintet two out of three games Thursday night. The losing team played under the handicap of an insufficient number of players. Browns escaped a triple defeat by winning the last game by twenty-three pins.

John Purdom turned in a three-game series of 564 to lead the winners. Moore topped the losers with 547. Box scores:

Babe Ruth has just won the duck shooting title of the Yankees. He also holds the dollar snagging honors.

SCHOOL COURT LOOP WILL BEGIN SECOND ROUND SATURDAY

Second round of play in the Intra-City Grade School Basketball League is scheduled for Saturday morning at Central High School gymnasium.

Spring Hill 4, which won its opening round game from McKinley 4A by a score of 9 to 3, will meet McKinley 4B at 8 a. m.

Having lost its first round engagement to McKinley 5A by the close margin of 7 to 6, Spring Hill fifth graders will try to show a reversal of form in their second round game with McKinley 5B at 9 o'clock.

The third game of the round brings together Spring Hill 6 and McKinley 6B. Spring Hill sixth graders won their first game from McKinley 6A by the lopsided count of 24 to 1 and hope to duplicate against the "B" quintet from the same school.

McKinley 6B is the defending champion, having won the title last season.

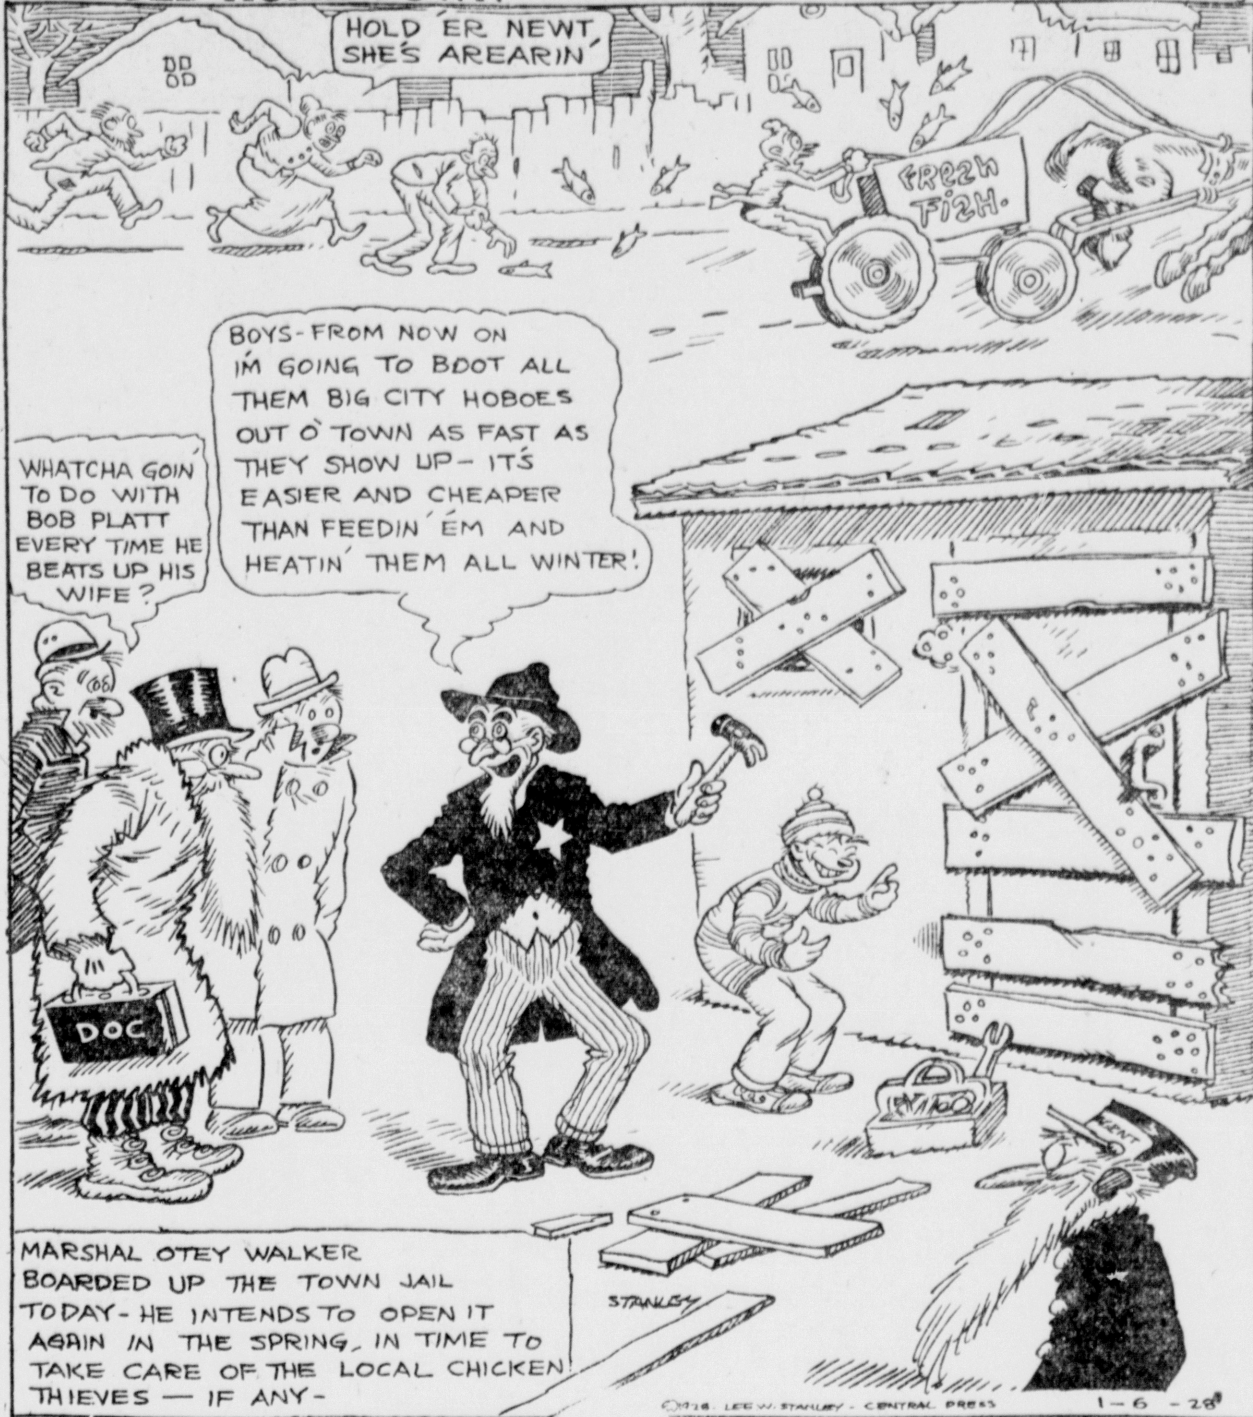

FAMOUS FIVE WINS FROM WIZARDS HERE

The Famous Auto Five, an independent Xenia basketball team, opened its season auspiciously by trouncing the Xenia Wizards 27 to 23 in a contest crowded with thrills at the Tabernacle Thursday night. The Wizards led 16 to 13 at the half.

Vannorsdall and Robert Gerner were high point men for the winners. Muterspaw and Strowbridge were outstanding in the Wizards' lineup.

The Famous Auto Five will meet the Alpha K. of P. quintet on the Alpha floor next Tuesday night. Alpha will appear at the Tabernacle for a third game with the Wizards next Thursday night.

DESCRIBE ROOM 40 AS BEST GUARDED SECRET OF LATE WAR

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Heretofore unknown ramifications of the famous "Room 40" frequently described as "the best kept secret of the World War," were disclosed at Edinburgh by Sir Alfred Ewing, who in 1914 was in charge of the room.

"Room 40" was a department at the British Admiralty known to very few persons. Its business was to decipher German radio messages, and, as a result, every movement by German warships was known in advance to the British Government.

As an example of the information thus obtained, the British Navy was enabled to go out to meet the Germans in the battles of the Dogger Bank and Jutland.

Famous Messages "Room 40" also deciphered the message from the German U-boat which sank the Lusitania, and it revealed the German intrigue with Mexico that brought the United States into the World War.

Relating his fascinating story of espionage and counter-espionage, Sir Alfred Ewing said that at the outbreak of the war he was director of naval education. At that time there was no department for dealing with cyphers, and he was asked by the Government to undertake the work.

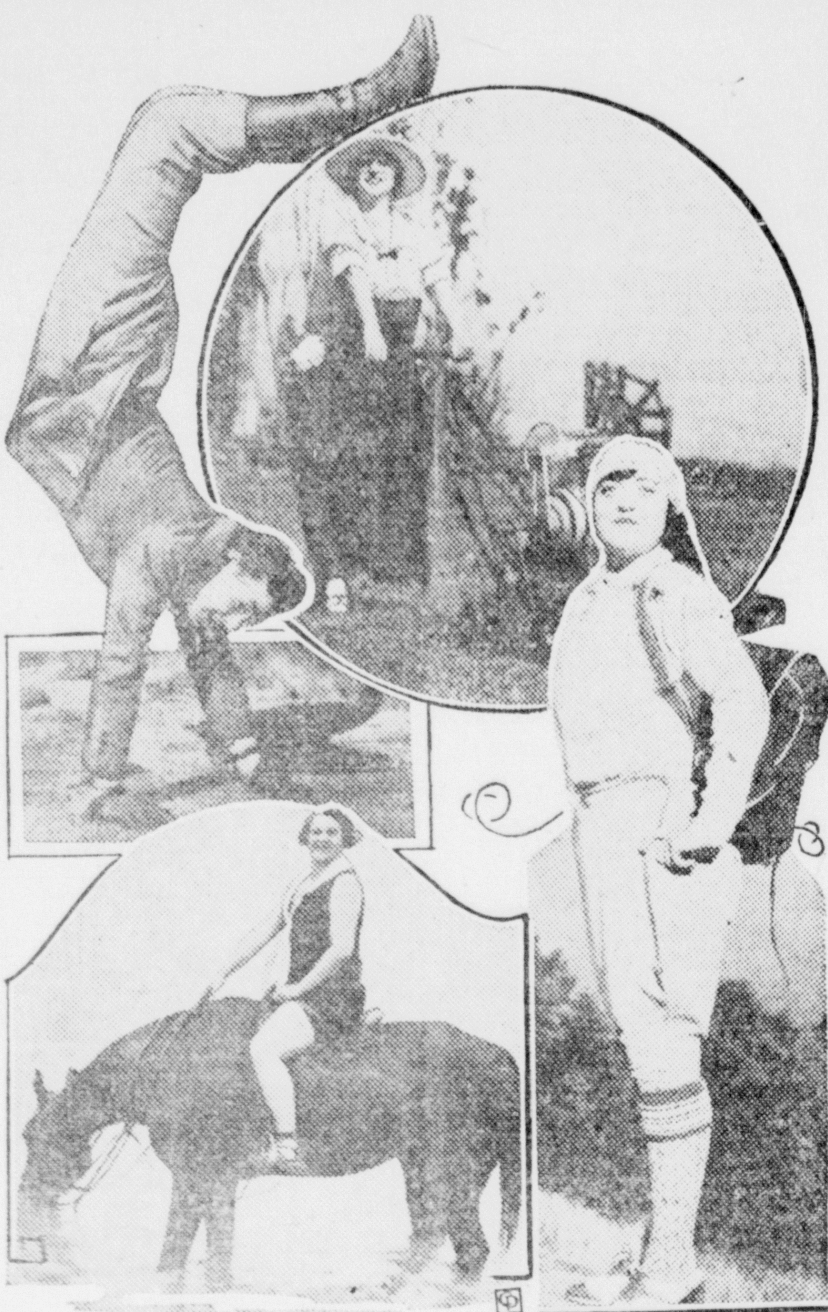

"I got a few friends to come and help me," Sir Alfred said. "We worked hard and had remarkable luck. The staff of cryptographers was gradually increased until it numbered fifty. Numerous listening stations were set up at which the German fleet signals and other messages were systematically taken in and from which they were telegraphed to the Admiralty to be deciphered. When the work had passed its initial stage, as many as 1,000 intercepted messages were dealt with in twenty-four hours.

"In this way a close and constant watch was kept on the German fleet, and information was obtained beforehand of their respective movements. Thus it was, for example, that the British Admiralty knew the day before the Battle of Dogger Bank what German ships were coming out, and what time they were coming, and where they were going.

Aid To Navy "All this information was obtained from signals from German headquarters to the ships concerned. It was obtained in good time to enable the British Admiralty to arrange for suitable counter measures.

"Next morning the Battle of Dogger Bank began. The watchers in the Admiralty, deciphering every signal."

OPERA SINGERS ATHLETIC NOW

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Horse shoes, rabbits' feet, white heather and all the other good luck symbols are being tossed out of the dressing rooms of the stars of the Metropolitan opera as their occupants turn to a new fetish—athletics.

Most any morning Lawrence Tibbett, if he is scheduled to sing a difficult role that evening, can be found in a secluded corner walking on his hands.

He declares the exercise sends the blood tingling to his throat and head, and when he starts on his first aria his voice is as "warm" as it otherwise would be later in the act.

In the "Old Days" Only a generation back, the sole exercise of prima donnas was to drive up Fifth avenue and through the park in a Victoria which moved very slowly so that pedestrians could absorb details of the singer's apparel.

Now, many like Rosa Ponselle, are out-of-doors enthusiasts. At her summer home she swims, plays tennis and golf, rows a canoe and operates her own motorboat. All these are merely side issues to mountain climbing. Ponselle declares it strengthens her lungs and improves her breathing.

When Galli-Curci feels her voice isn't quite as perfect as it should be, she pushes a lawn mower over her country estate. Fifteen minutes of this and she can trill the most difficult passages with ease.

Perhaps the same amount of exercise and time in the fresh air would give the same results without a lawn mower attachment. But it would be a waste of time to suggest this to Mme. Galli-Curci.

Elisabeth Rethberg, formerly of the Dresden opera, and now of the "Met," is fond of horseback riding and she also likes the water, so she decided to get ready for the concert season by donning a bathing suit and singing arias astride a horse as she galloped through the waters.

All of which goes to show that while old-time wonder workers have been thrown into the discard, the artistic temperament remains the same.

SECRETARY OF OHIO BANKERS CALLED BY COUNTY GRAND JURY

BUYRUS, O., Jan. 6.—Charles H. Mylander, secretary of the Ohio Bankers Association, has been subpoenaed to appear before the county grand jury here and testify concerning the $175,000 robbery of the Commercial Savings Bank, at Gallion, last June, it was learned today.

The subpoena for Mylander is said to have been asked by Common Pleas Judge Walter Wright as the result of a speech made by Mylander here last Monday night in which he is reported to have said that all the facts concerning the robbery had not been brought to light.

Two men, Wilbur Hand and Harry Zillick, of Toledo, have already been convicted of complicity in the hold-up and are under sentence to the state penitentiary. Arthur Hand, brother of Wilbur, is also under arrest. All of these men declare they were "framed" by Tom Schwabner, a detective employed by the Ohio Bankers Association.

TYPHOID CLINICS TO COMBAT DISEASE

A series of typhoid fever clinics was opened in Yellow Springs, Thursday afternoon by the Greene County Red Cross, in cooperation with the fight against the epidemic of typhoid in that village. Sixty-one people were inoculated.

Dr. R. H. Grube, county health commissioner and Dr. W. C. Marshall were in charge of the clinic and were assisted by Mrs. A. C. Swinerton, chairman; Mrs. H. A. Hoffman, nurse and Mrs. Leon Reed.

A similar clinic was held Friday afternoon in the mayor's office.

RE-NAME DIRECTORS ON LOAN CO. BOARD

The directorate will hold its yearly organization meeting next Monday night.

Present officers are: H. L. Smith, president; J. W. Prugh, vice president; H. S. LeSourd, secretary, and H. D. Smith, attorney.

I Have Said in My Heart

By IDA H. McGLONE GIBSON FRIENDSHIP

Is there a young man today capable of true and loyal friendship? This is a question put to me by a youth who has just passed through a most devastating experience.

The lad in question is most loyal and true himself. In fact, to speak no ill of anyone is one of his great rules of life. Although he is very popular, there are few men of his own age he calls friends.

Within the last year he made the acquaintance of a young man that seemed to him to be just the person he had been searching for all his life.

He found that his young man loved music and art. They discussed books and compared their experiences in far-off places. For this friend the youth in question gave up much of his time. At a cost of his own success he helped the other to achieve, and worked with him to finish a piece of work that was very remunerative.

"It was because I thought he was my friend," said the boy, "that I let him use me to further his own ends."

"I introduced him to people that otherwise he would never have met. I gave him my friendship, which meant that I always had on tap for him the best within myself."

A few months ago I began to wake up to the fact that this chap was only using me; and, besides that, behind my back was saying not only unkind things, but things that were flagrantly untrue.

"Many times I have determined to just go and push his face in until you could not tell it from the back of his head, but I have been dissuaded by calmer minds. However, I think I shall do it yet."

"Today I think I hate him more than I have ever hated anything or anyone, not because he has tried so hard to injure me, but because he has taken from me something that I can never get back again."

"I shall never have quite the same faith in human beings again."

I shall always be more or less suspicious of honeyed words, and I am afraid that some day I may lose a real friend, because I will not dare to trust him."

BRAVERY! Man Suddenly Blind Wins Success in New Field

By HAZEL CANNING Staff Writer for Central Press and Gazette

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Seven years ago, Julius Jonas was sales manager for one of the larger American industries. Four hundred men were under his direction.

Then, suddenly, an accident left him blind.

When such misfortune comes to many men, they give up, and are content to sit in a chair and live on their savings, or by help of their families for the rest of their days.

But Julius Jonas is not of that stuff. Instead, when he had to start life anew—at 45—and sightless, he struck out.

He found that about all a blind man could do for a living was to make brooms. But he felt he was good for something better than broom making. Let him tell the story.

"I wanted to sell things, still. So I looked me up an insurance company and asked for a place as agent. I got it. As I went out I heard a man say: 'How does that poor blind guy expect to make the grade?' I smiled. I had my hopes."

Jonas' hopes were fulfilled. For the first six months he sold enough insurance to make himself an average income of $150 weekly. For the last four years he has been a member of the $200,000 club, which means he has sold that amount annually. Last year he sold more than $300,000.

Jonas uses his ready wit and cheerful philosophy and shrewd knowledge of human nature in achieving his success. But he doesn't realize he has these qualities. For instance, there was that "prospect" Jonas "lacked" recently.

"Do you know," said the man, "my time is worth $3 an hour."

DEATH CLAIMS MRS. INDIANA ANDERSON

Following a brief illness, Mrs. Indiana Anderson, 88, widow of the late J. Robert Anderson, passed away at her home in Spring Valley at 3:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon. Death was due to a complication of diseases.

Mrs. Anderson was born in Bellbrook April 23, 1839 and lived her entire life in Greene County. Her husband died seven years ago in March.

She was a member of the M. E. Church at Spring Valley and was the last member of her family.

Surviving is one stepson, William Anderson, Colorado Springs, and a number of nephews and nieces. Funeral services will be held at the home Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock with burial at Spring Valley.

Is "YELLOW MASK" Depriving You of Teeth Beauty?

Lift this unbecoming veil—Accept Science's New Way to Dazzling White Teeth

LOOK in your mirror. You see a thin mask of yellow on your teeth. You brush and brush to lift it. Still it remains—irremovable. You despair.

"Oh," you say, discouraged. "My teeth are naturally yellow—I simply can't have lovely white teeth."

But the truth is that you can... teeth as lustrous as purest ivory. In fact, you have them now. Only that stubborn "yellow mask" is hiding them.

What Makes this "Yellow Mask?"

In your saliva is a "liquid cement" that glues to your teeth. Dental science calls it Calculus. It forms a hard glassy mask.

But worse still Calculus is an absorbent—in all stages. Food, coffee, and tobacco stain it—that yellowish tinge. Enamel itself cannot absorb.

So to gain teeth loveliness lift this mask of ever-staining Calculus.

Ordinary dentifrices are powerless to aid you. They gloss over Calculus like ice over ice. You know this because that yellowish tinge remains no matter how often you brush.

But dental science now provides the solution. A new, simple and pleasant way. Use it and dazzling white teeth will come quickly.

Dental Science's Master Achievement

There is one precious substance that will positively remove the yellow mask of Calculus. Leading dentists employ it in the cleaning of teeth. All science recognizes its great virtues. It cannot injure the softest enamel. And it works like magic!

This substance is "Tri-Calcium Phosphate."

Phosphate. Dental science has long tried to embody it in a pleasant, tasty toothpaste. Only now has this been successfully accomplished. The results are marvelous.

The name of this magic preparation is ORPHOS. Dentists everywhere recommend it—especially for teeth difficult to whiten. Men and women are delighted with it. Try it—today.

Note these Marvelous Results

Roll out an inch of ORPHOS Tooth Paste on your brush. Brush vigorously. Then look in your mirror. Note the tremendous effect on that "yellow mask". Feel a strangely pleasant cooling sensation in the gums—that's eleven healing and soothing ingredients pouring in health and firmness.

Be sure and get a tube of ORPHOS today. Roll that creamy enamel of that uncomely yellow veil. Know the thrill of teeth beauty for the first time. Buy from your druggist—or clip and mail coupon below for a generous "Convince Yourself" Tube. Act now—at beauty's request!

DESCRIBE ROOM 40 AS BEST GUARDED SECRET OF LATE WAR

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Heretofore unknown ramifications of the famous "Room 40" frequently described as "the best kept secret of the World War," were disclosed at Edinburgh by Sir Alfred Ewing, who in 1914 was in charge of the room.

"Room 40" was a department at the British Admiralty known to very few persons. Its business was to decipher German radio messages, and, as a result, every movement by German warships was known in advance to the British Government.

As an example of the information thus obtained, the British Navy was enabled to go out to meet the Germans in the battles of the Dogger Bank and Jutland.

Famous Messages
"Room 40" also deciphered the message from the German U-boat which sank the Lusitania, and it revealed the German intrigue with Mexico that brought the United States into the World War.

Relating his fascinating story of espionage and counter-espionage, Sir Alfred Ewing said that at the outbreak of the war he was director of naval education. At that time there was no department for dealing with cyphers, and he was asked by the government to undertake the work.

"I got a few friends to come and help me," Sir Alfred said. "We worked hard and had remarkable luck. The staff of cryptographers was gradually increased until it numbered fifty. Numerous listening stations were set up at which the German fleet signals and other messages were systematically taken in and from which they were telegraphed to the Admiralty to be deciphered. When the work had passed its initial stage, as many as 2,000 intercepted messages were dealt with in twenty-four hours.

"In this way a close and constant watch was kept on the German fleet, and information was obtained beforehand of their respective movements. Thus it was, for example, that the British Admiralty knew the day before the Battle of Dogger Bank what German ships were coming out, and what time they were coming, and where they were going.

Aid To Navy
"All this information was obtained from signals from German headquarters to the ships concerned. It was obtained in good time to enable the British Admiralty to arrange for suitable counter measures.

"Next morning the Battle of Dogger Bank began. The watchers in the Admiralty, deciphering every signal."

OPERA SINGERS ATHLETIC NOW

Exclusive Central Press Dispatch To The Gazette

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Horse shoes, rabbits' feet, white heather and all the other good luck symbols are being tossed out of the dressing rooms of the stars of the Metropolitan opera as their occupants turn to a new fetish—athletics.

Most any morning Lawrence Tibbett, if he is scheduled to sing a difficult role that evening, can be found in a secluded corner walking on his hands.

He declares the exercise sends the blood tingling to his throat and head, and when he starts on his first aria his voice is as "warm" as it otherwise would be later in the act.

In the "Old Days"
Only a generation back, the sole exercise of prima donnas was to drive up Fifth avenue and through the park in a Victoria which moved very slowly so that pedestrians could absorb details of the singer's apparel.

Now many like Rosa Ponselle, are out-of-doors enthusiasts. At her summer home she swims, plays tennis and golf, rows a canoe and operates her own motorboat. All these are merely side issues to mountain climbing. Ponselle declares it strengthens her lungs and improves her breathing.

SECRETARY OF OHIO BANKERS CALLED BY COUNTY GRAND JURY

BUENOS AIRES, O., Jan. 6.—Charles H. Mylander, secretary of the Ohio Bankers Association, has been subpoenaed to appear before the county grand jury here and testify concerning the $175,000 robbery of the Commercial Savings Bank, at Gallion, last June, it was learned today.

The subpoena for Mylander is said to have been asked by Common Pleas Judge Walter Wright as the result of a speech made by Mylander here last Monday night in which he is reported to have said that all the facts concerning the robbery had not been brought to light.

Two men, Wilbur Hand and Harry Zillicoff, of Toledo, have already been convicted of complicity in the holdup and are under sentence to the state penitentiary. Arthur Hand, brother of Wilbur, is also under arrest. All of these men declare they were "framed" by Tom Schwerner, a detective employed by the Ohio Bankers Association.

RECEIVERSHIP OF GRAIN COMPANY IS TERMINATED HERE

Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy has approved a final entry in the case of Oliver Belden against the Xenia Grain Co., authorizing the termination of the receivership for the old grain company and dismissing the case.

First and final report presented to the court by Attorney J. A. Finney, receiver, successor to the late C. H. Little, former receiver, was confirmed.

The court, finding that all assets of the case had been exhausted and all paid off, discharged the receiver.

Application of M. A. Oliver for allowance of a claim for $543.88 against the grain company, alleged due to Oliver and Kohnson, was disallowed as the claim was head invalid by the court.

Application of Oliver Belden on his claim for services rendered former Receiver Little from June 1, 1923 to August 1, 1924, was overruled by the court.

The court sustained, however, Belden's claim for $248.97, money he had advanced the grain firm.

Belden's third application for correction of an error in the dividend of 25 per cent declared previously by the court to him, totaling $324.65, of which Belden alleged he received only $31.82, was part allowed by the court.

The court ruled that to rectify the dividend, Belden should have received $31.15, whereas he was paid only $31.82, leaving $49.33 still due him.

On application of the receiver, the court found that checks issued to the Dunnington Grain Co. for $12.97; and to Elliott and cannot be delivered, and are therefore cancelled, the receiver being absolved from any liability.

The court also allowed fees for services of the receiver and his attorney.

PARTITION APPROVED

Partition of property appraised at $800 has been confirmed in the case of Margaret Maxon against William Maxon in Common Pleas Court.

SALE CONFIRMED

Sale of property to P. N. Sigler has been approved in the case of Matthias D. Smith against Lida Werner in Common Pleas Court.

HEARING SET

Application filed in Probate Court by Agnes M. Hurley to be appointed guardian of Carrie Ambuhl, an incompetent person, has been fixed for a hearing January 10 at 9 a. m.

ESTATE VALUED

Gross value of the estate of Lavina S. Harner is estimated at $3,230.88 in Probate Court. Debts, including the cost of administration, amount to $219.10, leaving a net, market value of $3,111.78.

Private sale of property has been ordered in the case of William Ross, as administrator, against Edith Atkins and others in Probate Court.

PROF. SLUTZ GIVES LECTURES ON YOUTH WEEKLY IN DAYTON

Prof. Frank D. Slutz, well known here and over the country as an authority on child education and former head of the Moraine School at Dayton, is giving a series of "Know Youth" lectures in Memorial Hall in that city, which is attracting attention of people here, especially the teachers.

The lecture schedule calls for an appearance every Sunday afternoon starting Jan. 8 and concluding Feb. 12. Prof. Slutz takes the platform at about 3 o'clock, being preceded by a choir, glee club and some such organization in a half hour program. The lectures are free, being sponsored by the Y. M. C. A., through co-operation of several other county organizations.

During the series Prof. Slutz will answer from the platform any question on child problems, written to him. His various subjects, under the general head, and which will be treated on respective Sunday afternoons, are: "What Do You Know About Youth?", "The Magic Years of Childhood," "What Price Quantity Production?" "What Shall We Tell Our Children About Sex?" "Some Old Family Problems," and "What Ails Our Youth?"

AUTHORITIES PROBE STORY OF GIRL FOUND WANDERING ON ROAD

Authorities are holding a four-year-old girl who gave her name as Patsy McCarty, Belmont, suburb of Dayton, who was found wandering along a road near Osborn late Thursday afternoon.

The girl was brought to Police Headquarters here by an Osborn carpenter, who discovered her wandering along the highway and doubted an unusual story she related.

Under questioning by Police Chief M. E. Graham, the girl declared her parents were dead and that she had been living with her guardian in Belmont, who also died recently.

She declared that she had intended to go to Osborn to meet her home with Anna McCarty, at aunt, whom she called "Aunt Ann." With this purpose in mind, she "thumbed" a ride to Osborn Thursday afternoon and conducted a futile search for her relative. The girl said her trunk was to have been sent on to her aunt's home later.

Police were unable to locate any person by the name of McCarty in Osborn. Chief Graham believes her story is false and that the explanation was merely invented to hide the possible fact that she had run away from home.

The girl told police she could spend the night with Xenia friends but police were also unsuccessful in locating any resident of this city who claimed an acquaintance with her. She was turned over to Sheriff Oliver Tate and spent Thursday night in the County Jail.

Chief Graham notified Dayton police Thursday night in an effort to check the girl's story, but was advised to communicate with the Montgomery County sheriff since Belmont is not within the jurisdiction of the Dayton Police Department.

RECEIVERSHIP OF GRAIN COMPANY IS TERMINATED HERE

Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy has approved a final entry in the case of Oliver Belden against the Xenia Grain Co., authorizing the termination of the receivership of the old grain company and discharging the receiver.

First and final report presented to the court by Attorney J. A. Finney, receiver, successor to the late J. L. Little, former receiver, was confirmed.

The court, finding that all assets of the case had been exhausted and all paid out, discharged the receiver.

Application of M. A. Oliver for allowance of a claim for $545.88 against the grain company, alleged due to Oliver and Koulson, was disallowed as the claim was held invalid by the court.

Application of Oliver Belden of his claim for services rendered former Receiver Little from June 1, 1923 to August 1, 1924, was overruled by the court.

The court sustained, however, Belden's claim for $248.97, money he had advanced the grain firm.

Belden's third application for correction of an error in the dividend of 25 per cent declared previously by the court to him, totaling $324.65, of which Belden alleged he received only $31.82, was in part allowed by the court.

The court ruled that to rectify the dividend, Belden should have received $31.82, leaving $49.33 still due him.

On application of the receiver, the court found that checks issued to the Dunnington Grain Co. for $123.77, and to Elliott and Beasley for $12.06, have not and cannot be delivered, and are therefore cancelled, the receiver being absolved from any liability.

The court also allowed fees for services of the receiver and his attorney.

PARTITION APPROVED

Partition of property appraised at $800 has been confirmed in the case of Margaret Maxon against William Maxon in Common Pleas Court.

SALE CONFIRMED

Sale of property to P. N. Sigler has been approved in the case of Matthias D. Smith against Lida Werner in Common Pleas Court.

HEARING SET

Application filed in Probate Court by Agnes M. Hurley to be appointed guardian of Carrie Ambuhl, an incompetent person, has been fixed for a hearing January 10 at 9 a. m.

ESTATE VALUED

Gross value of the estate of Lavina S. Harner is estimated at $3,330.88 in Probate Court. Debts, including the cost of administration, amount to $219.10, leaving a net market value of $3,111.78.

PRIVATE SALE ORDERED

Private sale of property has been ordered in the case of William Ross, as administrator, against Edith Atkins and others in Probate Court.

PROF. SLUTZ GIVES LECTURES ON YOUTH WEEKLY IN DAYTON

Prof. Frank D. Slutz, well known here and over the country as an authority on child education and former head of the Moraine School at Dayton, is giving a series of "Know Youth" lectures in Memorial Hall in that city, which is attracting attention of people here, especially the teachers.

The lecture schedule calls for an appearance every Sunday afternoon starting Jan. 8 and concluding Feb. 12. Prof. Slutz takes the platform at about 3 o'clock, being preceded by a choir, glee club and some such organization in a half hour program. The lectures are free, being sponsored by the Y. M. C. A., through co-operation of several other county organizations.

During the series Prof. Slutz will answer on child problems, written to him. His various subjects, under the general head, and which will be treated on respective Sunday afternoons, are: "What Do You Know About Youth?", "The Magic Years of Childhood", "What Price Quantity Production?", "What Shall We Tell Our Children About Sex?", "Some Old Familiar Problems", and "What Ails Our Youth?"

Pilot Cheats Death

Death lost another skirmish with the air mail when Pilot Harry G. Smith, 34, veteran Cleveland-New York pilot, escaped unhurt after making an emergency landing in a clearing on Red Top mountain, near Du Bois, Pa. Smith, who used to fly the mail with Col. Lindbergh, became lost as his plane neared the Allegheny mountains in a blinding snowstorm.

AUTHORITIES PROBE STORY OF GIRL FOUND WANDERING ON ROAD

Authorities are holding a four-year-old girl who gave her name as Patsy McCarty, Belmont, suburb of Dayton, who was found wandering along a road near Osborn late Thursday afternoon.

The girl was brought to Police Headquarters here by an Osborn carpenter, who discovered her walking along the highway and doubted an unusual story she related.

Under questioning by Police Chief M. E. Graham, the girl declared her parents were dead and that she had been living with her guardian in Belmont, who also died recently.

She declared that she had intended to go to Osborn to make her home with Anna McCarty, an aunt, whom she called "Aunt Ann." With this purpose in mind, she "thumbed" a ride to Osborn Thursday afternoon and conducted a futile search for her relative. The girl said her trunk was to have been sent on to her aunt's home later.

Police were unable to locate any person by the name of McCarty in Osborn. Chief Graham believes her story is false and that the explanation was merely invented to hide the possible fact that she had run away from home.

The girl told police she could spend the night with Xenia friends but police were also unsuccessful in locating any resident of this city who claimed an acquaintance with her. She was turned over to Sheriff Oliver Tate and spent Thursday night in the County Jail.

Chief Graham notified Dayton police Thursday night in an effort to check the girl's story, but was advised to communicate with the Montgomery County sheriff since Belmont is not within the jurisdiction of the Dayton Police Department.

(1-6-13-20.)STORY OF MISSIONS
SUBJECT OF PASTOR
AT PRAYER SERVICETwo more meetings remain of the Week of Prayer. Friday night at the Presbyterian Church and Sunday night at the Reformed Church. Dr. H. B. McElree is in charge at the Presbyterian Church meeting and Dr. W. N. Shank preaches Sunday evening.A larger crowd was present
Thursday evening at Second U. P.
Church when the Rev. D. A. Sellers brought a message on "Missions." He complimented the United Presbyterian Church on its per capita gifts to missions, citing the fact that per member they give more than any other denomination.The preacher took three texts—
Matthew 28:16, "The Great Commission to go Teach"; Acts 1, a few verses at the beginning of the chapter dealing with the order of Christ "To be witnesses"; and second Corinthians, fifth chapter and fourteenth verse—that we are "Ambassadors of Christ for the reconciliation of the world to Him."With these verses for the background the speaker reviewed the growth of missionary work, from the early church, through the Roman Church Missionaries, past the Reformation Days, to the revival of the missionary enterprise in the early nineteenth century. "The great work is progressing all over the world," he said, "and the power of the Gospel is just the same today.""The work today is not merely preaching, but the work is as broad as the needs of man—educational, medical and evangelistic which covers all the needs of man." The Rev. Mr. Sellers took several missionary stories which showed theglow and power of the missionary effort today.He closed by pointing out the effects and results of a true missionary spirit on the part of individual Christians, churches, and the nations to which the Gospel is being sent. "Our responsibility is to keep up the good work, by our interest, our prayers and our money," he said. The meeting closed with a period of prayer.The Rev. W. N. Shank, D. D. led in the opening prayer. The Rev.
Mr. Sellers pronounced the benediction.On The Air

The Theater

The writer of "The Song of Love" and "Tell Me, Daisy" and other wistful songs that haunted Xenia theatergoers during the reign of "Blossom Time" and "The Student Prince," has passed on.

Dorothy Donnelly, noted actress, who later turned her talents to musical hits, died at her New York apartment Wednesday from pneumonia and nephritis.

Dorothy Donnelly was known as the actress who insisted anyone him a "ham actor." They were married in December 1925, after musical hits, died at her New York apartment Wednesday from pneumonia and nephritis.

"Partners in Crime" is the new melodramatic comedy which Paramount has provided for the laugh team of Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton.

The Theater

The writer of "The Song of Love" and "Tell Me, Daisy" and other wistful songs that haunted Xenia theatergoers during the reign of "Blossom Time" and "The Student Prince," has passed on.

Dorothy Donnelly, noted actress, who later turned her talents to musical hits, died at her New York apartment Wednesday from pneumonia and nephritis.

Dorothy Donnelly was known as the actress who insisted anyone guessing the riddle of what the public wants will become rich. Her first guess was that the music of Franz Schubert could be set up in a show to appeal to popular audiences. "Blossom Time" was the result and it not only used Schubert's songs but his story of love. Her next adaptation was "The Student Prince." Miss Donnelly was 48 years old and was leading woman for the Murray Hill Stock Co., when she was 14. Her last appearance as an actress was in 1915 when she appeared in "Madame X" as "Jacqueline."

CHAPTER LV

Mrs. France's eyes snapped behind her steel-rimmed glasses, and she thumped the counter smartly with her small work-roughened hand.

"Don't you come here and talk to me about my son, Pat," she said with a vigorous nod of her small neat looking head. "Just remember that you were no kind of a wife to him at any time."

She stopped talking and with a jerk she turned towards the side door that opened from the side yard of the little white house.

Lily turned, too, following her eyes. There stood Pat in his old corduroy pants and shirt sleeves, looking at them from under brows that were twisted into a frown.

He came towards them, his blue eyes shining in the sun that glared in through the front window and lay like a rug of gold tissue on the wooden floor.

"What's the matter?" he asked and his voice was so cold and dull that Lily wondered if it could be Pat's voice.

He put his head to one side a little and looked down at her. "Did you come to see me?" he asked, standing close to her. So close that by moving an inch or two Lily could have touched him.

His nearness—the warmth and comfort of him—affected her as they always did, and she wanted to move that inch or two. She ached to throw herself into his arms.

And she would have done it too, if it had not been for his mother, who spoke just at that precise second, in answer to his question. "I'll tell you what's the matter, Pat," she began. "This woman has come down here to tell me that she is going to drag Elizabeth's name and yours through the divorce court. That's what's the matter, if you want to know."

Lily gasped with surprise, and she heard Pat make a sound that was not quite a gasp or quite a grunt, but a combination of the two. He stepped back quickly, and his face reddened with anger. His eyes narrowed into a single gleam.

"Would you do that?" he asked, "when you know doggoned well that that girl is as pure as any woman that ever walked? And after the thing you did yourself? After the way you stayed out afternoon after afternoon with Drummond, and then came back to me with some cock-and-bull story, wearing clothes and furs that he had given you? Why, if anybody is going to be dragged through the courts, you ought to be."

Lily scarcely heard what he said after that first sentence. "When you know that girl is as pure as any woman that ever walked?"

It seemed to burn itself into her brain—that sentence, and the tone in which Pat uttered it.

"Why, he speaks of her as if she were an angel instead of the woman who is trying to take him away from me, in all probability," she said to herself, and all of her jealousy of the meek-faced little nurse faded up within her like a fire fanned by a high wind.

"Don't talk to me about her, Pat France," she said to him. "We'd be living together, and perfectly happy today if it hadn't been for her. She's been after you from the very day we were married—getting Sadie Jetterson to give a party for us just so she could have her there, too. She's chased you in her quiet, underhanded way and she still is. And you know it, and if I want to name her in my divorce suit, I'm going to, and you just try to stop me."

And then, before anyone could stop her from going, she slipped from the high stool where she had been sitting and was out of the door at the front of the shop and into her mother's old car that waited at the curb.

"I'll do it, too, I'll fix them both," she promised herself furiously, going through the humble streets of the neighborhood that once had been like home to her. She never had liked them, even when they had been home-like and familiar to her, and she fairly hated them now.

"How did I ever get into such a place and in with such people?" she asked herself, turning towards the heart of the town. She was going straight to the lawyer's office to tell him to go ahead with her divorce just as fast as he could do it. She was full of resentment and a strong desire for revenge.

At 12 o'clock, when she left his office high up in the Elkins building tower, the noon-tide bells were ringing.

"He's not going to wait forever, you know," Sue said.

She knew that she ought to go home and help her mother with the endless round of household tasks—the polishing and sweeping and cooking and mending. She knew that she was expecting her for lunch, too.

"But I'm not going home," Lily decided. "I'm too blue and miserable."

In her misery she turned towards Staley, who after all, had all sorts of amusing things to do at the end of his purse strings.

"Take me to lunch," she commanded him, when she burst unceremoniously into his private office, and then, in the doorway, she stopped.

For Staley's private secretary, a sweet-faced little blonde woman whom Lily had often noticed and honestly admired, was sitting on the corner of Staley's desk, with her hands on his shoulders, and Staley's hair was ruffled as if she had been fussing with it.

She turned and flushed a guilty red when she heard Lily open the door and Staley, very much flustered, jumped to his feet, smoothing down his hair with both hands.

"Oh," said Lily. "You're all alike, aren't you? All you men—"

It was a write and silly thing to say, but millions of women have said it and have meant it, too, just as she meant it then.

She barely noticed the little blonde secretary when she stunk out of the office. Her eyes were on Staley, and so were all her thoughts.

"Here he is, wildly in love with me, so he thinks," she said to herself, "but he carries on a common-law affair with that little woman. If I married him—"

Oh, well, what if he did not behave himself after she married him? What if he did go on having these small and unimportant love
